AIRSHIP BURSTS; 16 MEN FALL 300 FEET; STILL LIVE

TRIAL TRIP OF MONSTER AIR MACHINE TERMINATES IN BAD ACCIDENT.

ONLY ONE FATALITY EXPECTED

J. A. MORRELL HAS ILL LUCK WITH INVENTION IN ASCENT AT BERKELEY, CAL.

PANIC CREATED IN CROWD

The Several Thousand People Gathered to Witness Experiment Scatter in All Directions. Women Faint and Scream—Will Build Bigger Ship.

OAKLAND, Cal., May 23.—A giant airship, on its trial trip in Berkeley today, rose 300 feet from the earth before 10,000 people, tilted, burst and dropped to the ground with its crew of 16 men, every one of whom was injured. By one of those peculiar and fortunate chains of circumstances which sometimes attend sensational accidents, these 16 men miraculously escaped death. None of the injured, with the possible exception of one, is expected to die. Seven of them are seriously hurt and nine severely bruised and suffering from shock. Following is a list of the injured:

The Injured.

J. A. Morell, inventor of the airship, right leg broken and bruised.

Z. T. Taylor, an aeronaut known as "Captain Penfold," broken ankle and instep and injured spine.

Otto Olsen, one of the crew, broken ribs and injured back.

C. A. Nelson, an engineer, fractured pelvis and injuries to back.

S. Whipple, engineer, broken ribs and ankle, probable internal injuries.

L. V. Rogers, engineer, fractured right leg, contusions all over body, internally injured, probably die.

E. C. Wellin, newspaper photographer, San Francisco, injured, not bruised and suffering from shock.

Justin Barber, photographer, Berkeley, ribs broken and bruised.

P. H. Goodfriend, engineer, bruised and suffering from shock.

H. Miller, one of crew, cut and bruised, not serious.

John Byrne, pilot, bruised and lacerated, not serious.

Charles P. Hall, photographer, San Francisco, bruised and suffering from shock.

John Peterson, photographer, bruised and lacerated, not serious.

V. J. Fluno, engineer, cut and bruised, not serious.

John Ahern, engineer, bruised, injured slight.

W. Mowrey, engineer, bruised, injuries slight.

Spectacular Accident.

The accident was a spectacular and sensational one. Probably 10,000 people from Berkeley and Oakland had gath-

FLOODS AND TORNADO

OKLAHOMA DAMAGED THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS.

Several Are Reported Killed in Pottawatomie County—Bridges Are Washed Away.

GUTHRIE, Okla., May 23.—Oklahoma has been visited by the most disastrous flood in the history of the white man in the state. It has been raining over 20 hours, all streams are at flood and rapidly rising. Railroad traffic on the Frisco, Rock Island and Santa Fe in many parts of the state, is abandoned. Three great railroad bridges over the Cimarron have been washed out and damage will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. The low lands are all flooded.

SHAWNEE, Okla., May 23.—Two tornadoes in the space of 45 minutes brought havoc in the northern part of Pottawatomie county today. Walter Haworth is reported killed and Michael Burnett is believed to have been fatally hurt by flying timbers. The tornado first appeared near Maxfield and took in Asbelote and Meeker. Reports say that a dozen persons were injured near Asbelote.

WILL FIGHT LOCAL OPTION

Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association of Denver Will Enter Courts.

DENVER, Colo., May 23.—Contending that the local option law under which saloons and precincts in the city went dry in the municipal election Tuesday is unconstitutional, the Wholesale Liquor Dealers association has decided to test the statute in the courts.

Suit will be brought by the association within 30 days. Attorneys have been instructed to proceed against the city to restrain it from enforcing the local option law in the territory where the people voted out saloons. The action was fought through [illegible] and then the [illegible]

WOULD LESSEN TAFT'S CHANCES

PUBLICITY BILL AS PASSED BY HOUSE SUICIDAL.

JOHNSON EXPRESSES VIEWS

MEASURE WILL HARDLY BE SIGNED BY PRESIDENT.

BRYAN WON'T HAVE MAJORITY?

Minnesota Governor Intimates That He Does Not Believe Nebraskan Will Enter Convention at Denver With Nominating Majority.

NORFOLK, Va., May 23.—Governor Johnson of Minnesota, while in Norfolk today, denounced the Crumpacker amendment to the campaign contribution publicity bill, passed by the House yesterday, and he declared that if the Senate passed it he does not see how the President can conscienciously sign it.

"It is a bad bill," said Governor Johnson. "If it passes the Senate and becomes law by the President's signature, I believe it will defeat the nomination of Secretary Taft for the presidency. That measure will array the solid south against Mr. Taft's nomination then. However, I can not see how Mr. Roosevelt can approve the measure. The President has taken a stand for pure elections. His position is known country-wide and I do not believe he would sign such a bill were it put up to him. It would be suicidal."

Bryan Won't Have Majority?

When questioned in regard to his name being presented to the Denver convention, if Mr. Bryan had pledged or instructed for him two-thirds of the delegates, Governor Johnson intimated that he did not believe Mr. Bryan would enter the convention with a nominating majority pledged to him. He was averse to being interviewed on national political questions. He would not enter into detailed discussion of the presidential nomination fight.

"What the party wants is a winner," he said. "If many Democrats think Mr. Bryan is the logical candidate and winner, then nominate him but if they think I can win, nominate me. I am prepared to put up the fight of my life for election.

Should Leave Delegates Free.

"I think it party wisdom to send uninstructed delegates to national conventions. That leaves the delegates free to discuss all available candidates and then nominate the best man."

When asked if Senator John W. Daniel of Virginia had been selected to place his name in nomination in Denver, he said no selection had been made of any man. He also declared he understood that Senator Daniel was very friendly toward him.

Governor Johnson said that he would not be a candidate for re-election as governor of Minnesota, whether he received the Democratic presidential nomination or not.

BRYAN GRILLS TAFT

Calls Him the "Heir Apparent of the Roosevelt Regime."

MADISON, Wis., May 23.—Grilling Secretary Taft for his attitude on leading political questions and referring to him as the "heir apparent of the Roosevelt regime," Wm. J. Bryan addressed a large audience in the big gymnasium of the University of Wisconsin tonight. Mr. Bryan outlined some of the planks of the platform which he said will probably be adopted at Denver. One plank demands the election of senators by direct vote. He said Senator LaFollette was the only prominent Republican who favored and advocated this reform.

"There is no prominent Republican outside Wisconsin urging the nomination of LaFollette," said Mr. Bryan.

VESSELS LOST IN FOG BANKS

NEW YORK, May 23.—Dense fog, which held the coast in its grip today, made captive a big fleet of transatlantic liners and coasters which had reported off Sandy Hook in the early morning and prevented some 4,000 ocean travelers from reaching the city until hours after the time when they might otherwise have landed. Indeed, the white Star liner Arabic from Liverpool and the American liner Philadelphia from Southampton, which were reported early in the day off Fire Island, are still lost in the fog banks tonight.

WILL EXCEED $1,020,000,000

Total Appropriations of Present Congress Enormous.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Although the figures on the total appropriations for the present session of Congress are incomplete, from careful estimates the indications are that they will exceed $1,020,000,000. This is $100,000,000 in excess of any previous session. The largest increase over previous years are found in the postoffice pension, naval and river appropriation bills.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION.

FIFET TAKES SEATTLE

CITY CAPITULATES TO MONSTER BATTLESHIPS.

Enthusiastic Welcome Given Warriors of the Deep by Metropolis of the Northwest.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 23.—The city of Seattle, sitting on her seven clothed hills on the shore of Puget sound, capitulated today to the Atlantic fleet of battleships, under command of Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry. Mayor of the city were thrown open wide and Admiral Sperry was given the key, made of Alaskan gold.

As the fleet came into sight around Point "No Point," at 2 o'clock, it was caught sight of by over half a million people, assembled on the heights, terraces and high buildings and the shores of the bay were black with the northwest's patriotic people.

The city's normal population of one-quarter of a million was augmented by an equal number, who came from the states of Montana, Idaho and Oregon, and from across the Canadian border, to witness the unusual naval spectacle.

At 3 o'clock this morning the different divisions of the fleet, which was divided two days ago, reunited at Port Townsend. The Missouri came up from the navy yard at Bremerton and from Bellingham the flagship Connecticut, Kansas, Minnesota, Vermont, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. From Port Angeles came the Louisiana, Virginia and Ohio. Out of the harbor of Port Townsend steamed the Illinois and Kearsarge, and forming in single line, the reassembled fleet began the advance on Seattle in procession.

As the flagship arrived off West Point, it was met by a flotilla of excursion boats, which turned and followed in its wake as it rounded the forested points of jutting land, under the lee of the snow-capped Olympic range, along the channel into which in the days primeval, the wooden paddle of the Indian's war canoe was dipped.

Nearing the city, the steamer Umatilla, carrying the reception committee, came abreast of the Connecticut, turned and escorted her to the anchorage ground, while the hundreds of boats in the welcoming flotilla formed into double line and escorted the remainder of the fleet into the harbor. Anchors were dropped amid the fire of salutes, blowing of sirens and cheers from thousands of throats. The reception committee, headed by Mayor John F. Miller, boarded the Connecticut and officially assured Rear Admiral Sperry that he, his officers and men were "welcome to our city."

In the name of the city, Mayor Miller presented Rear Admiral Sperry with a golden key, fashioned from Alaskan gold.

Tonight, every ship is outlined from masthead to waterline in electric lights, and the Japanese residents are discharging novel fireworks.

The only official event tonight was a reception to the officers of the fleet at the Washington hotel, which was brilliantly decorated for the occasion. The fleet will remain in the harbor until May 27.

MME. GOULD WIFE OF PRINCE

New York American Says Marriage Took Place in This Country.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The American will say tomorrow that it secured tonight definite confirmation of the report that Mme. Anna Gould, formerly the wife of Count Boni de Castellane, was the bride of Prince Helie de Sagan when they sailed for Europe aboard different steamships on April 11 last. The American will say that the two were married at 404 Washington street, Hoboken, N. J., on April 10 last, and will quote Justice of the Peace W. C. Edenbender as admitting that he performed the ceremony.

AERONAUT FATALLY HURT

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo., May 23.—Hernie Schroeder, a young man of this vicinity, was dangerously and it is believed fatally injured, in attempting to make a balloon ascension here this afternoon. The wind was blowing hard when the balloon was liberated, and it was swept to one side with such rapidity that Schroeder struck the wall of an adjacent building with great force and was rendered unconscious. He was dragged through the tops of buildings for two blocks, finally landing on the porch of a residence.

CLEVELAND MUCH IMPROVED

LAKEWOOD, N. J., May 23.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland, when seen tonight at the Lakewood hotel, told a representative of the Associated Press that the former president, who has been ill at the hotel for several weeks, was making excellent progress.

CORONER REPORTS ON VICTIMS

Persons Whose Bodies Were Found on Gunness Farm Came to Death Through Felonious Homicide.

LA PORTE, Ind., May 23.—Declaring that they came to their deaths through felonious homicide, Coroner Mack this evening filed his official reports in the deaths of four more victims of the Gunness farm. The verdicts are in the cases of Jennie Olsen of Chicago, Ole Budsberg of Iola, Wis., and two unidentified bodies, one male and one female. The coroner holds that the persons who are responsible for their deaths are to him unknown. Six bodies still remain to be reported on.

ARMY NEEDS STRENGTHENING

General Bell Gives Views on Fighting Force of United States. Urges Counsel of Defense.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—"There will, I hope, be a bill introduced at the next session of Congress to organize a national counsel of defense because this nation is the only one not having a

"We have not an army fit to go to war with a first-class nation," added [illegible] "but we do [illegible] need a large army, but should have a large skeleton organization capable of development into such an army when trouble comes. We must do all we can to increase the efficiency of that portion of our army known as the National guard. The American [illegible] though [illegible] [illegible]

WILLIAMS WILL FIGHT

PROPOSES TO CONTINUE FILIBUSTER TO THE END.

Doesn't Believe Adjournment of Congress Will Be Reached Until End of Coming Week.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—John Sharp Williams, minority leader of the House, announced tonight after a recess had been taken until Monday, that the Democrats proposed to continue their filibuster until such legislation as President Roosevelt said recommended should receive consideration or final adjournment had been ordered by a vote of the majority.

In his view, adjournment of Congress will not be reached before the latter part of next week.

In a statement tonight, Representative Williams said:

"The Democracy is standing solid with less division than I ever knew in its ranks, still rendering the full Democratic vote of the House to any 30 independent Republicans to pass or to consider at any rate a bill for pre-election publication of campaign contributions; a bill to secure the liberty of the citizens by a modification of the powers exercised by inferior federal courts in connection with injunction bills; to safeguard the rights and dignity of the states against the same sort of attack; a bill to put wood pulp and print paper on the free list and a bill for a model insurance law in the District of Columbia.

"The Democracy will continue to present itself for that sort of an alliance. It will vote against a motion announced all along and as it will announce on the last day of the session, that it is ready and anxious to continue at the post of duty for an extra session, to be called by the President, if he be in earnest and really desirous to have passed the remedial legislation indicated in the foregoing."

KNABENSHUE COMES TO GRIEF

TOLEDO, O., May 23.—Roy Knabenshue and his new airship, capable of carrying three passengers, met with disaster upon the occasion of its second flight today. Knabenshue attempted to alight in the baseball park, where a game was in progress, but his machine became unmanageable and hit the fence back of the bleachers, causing consternation to the crowd. Propellers and gear were badly dantaged and the airship will be out of commission for several days.

BRONCO BUSTER KILLED

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Colo., May 23.—Preston H. Smith, Jr., aged 28 years, son of P. H. Smith, a prominent citizen of Grand Lake and one of the cleverest broncho busters and horsemen in the state, was killed at Troublesome this morning by a young horse he was trying to break to a saddle. The animal stood up almost upright on its hind legs for a second and then lost its balance and fell over backward. Smith was caught under the animal.

STREET CAR MEN VOTE.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—Without having received a full vote of the union on the question of accepting or rejecting the proposition of sending the strikers back to work as "new" men, pending arbitration, officers of the union tonight stated that the sentiment of the men favored a continuation of the present situation.

The referendum vote will not be tabulated until tomorrow.

DIVORCE COMPLAINT.—Myrtle Gaines yesterday filed suit in the county court in Denver for divorce from Charles A. Gaines, alleging cruelty. The couple were married in Colorado [illegible]

CHRISTIANITY IS MEANT FOR MEN

IS ESSENTIALLY MASCULINE, DECLARES REV. LANDRITH.

MEN, NOT WOMEN, ARE SOUGHT

SHOULD REPRESENT SPIRITUAL POWER OF CHURCHES.

BALLOTING STILL GOES ON

Two Bishops of the Eight New Ones to Be Chosen by the Methodist Episcopal Church Elected. Unusual Interest Manifested in Proceedings.

KANSAS CITY, May 23.—Christianity is not exclusively but essentially masculine. The Redeemer of mankind was a man. The Bible is essentially, though not exclusively, masculine. I maintain that the evangelization of the world is the work of man. Every man who starts on a downward course is led by men; men who are to be raised to a higher life, must be led by men. I want to see men represent the spiritual power of the churches. The present condition, which shows an average of only 40 men members in every congregation of 200, must be changed. It is the purpose of the Presbyterian brotherhood to make the men the active workers of the churches, and such a result will be realized."

In this vein, Rev. Dr. Landrith, president of the Belmont Female college of Nashville, made a powerful plea in support of the Presbyterian Brotherhood at today's session of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church of the United States of America.

Wants to Interest Young Men.

Continuing, Dr. Landrith said the evangelization of the world depended upon the success of the church in getting laymen interested as active workers. He said it was especially necessary to get the young men in the work.

The Presbyterian brotherhood movement, ministerial relief and child labor claimed practically all of the attention of the delegates today.

Rev. Dr. John Bushnell of Minneapolis, in submitting the report of the board of ministerial relief, made an eloquent plea for higher salaries and for liberal support of the work of the ministerial relief.

A committee was appointed to arrange a plan by which every minister will receive a salary of at least $1,000 a year. In submitting the report of the assembly Herald, the chairman of the committee said that if Congress will remove the duty on wood pulp the Herald will come to the next assembly without a deficit.

Mr. John B. Devins, who represents the New York Tribune fresh air fund, introduced a resolution, which was adopted, asking the members of the conference to seek the correction of violations of child labor laws.

Tonight a great evangelistic meeting was held at Convention hall. There were 12,000 persons present, and Rev. J. Wilbur Chappian of Philadelphia delivered the sermon.

Balloting Goes On.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—The epitomized history of the episcopal election is one effective ballot, electing two bishops of the eight new ones ordered, eight ballots that have been without result and the tenth cast and the ballot slips sealed, uncounted and not to be unsealed until Monday. Hence there can be nothing more tangible than speculation as to what the tenth ballot will show. There are those who, however, judging by his steady advance, believe there will be announced on Monday morning the election of Rev. W. A. Quayle of Chicago and that the election of Rev. Edwin H. Hughes president of Depauw university, will speedily follow. There are those, too, who look for the election of Rev. Wilson S. Lewis, president of the Morningside college, when the result of the tenth ballot is made known.

Perhaps the surprise of the day was the falling of in the vote for Rev. Joseph B. Hingeley, secretary of the conference, who, between the eighth and ninth ballots, lost three of his followers, because, it is said, of the receipt of a number of telegrams from a resident of Minneapolis, expressing amazement at the prominence Mr. Hingeley had attained in the voting.

The case of Rev. Charles L. Goodell, pastor of Calvary church, New York, who, having had a bishopric nearly within his grasp, has dropped almost out of sight in the voting, continues to excite interest, and his friends are looking forward to an announcement which he has promised to make to his congregation in New York tomorrow.

Harmony at M. P. Conference.

PITTSBURG, May 23.—Harmony prevailed at the final sessions of the general conference of the Methodist Protestant church, as a result of the action taken yesterday on church union. The only sensational incident of the session was the dropping of Rev. Dr. J. H. Clark of New Jersey from the board of ministerial education, and the substitution of Rev. W. D. Stults of New Jersey. Rev. Dr. T. J. Ogburn, in presenting Stults's name for a place on the board, ma[illegible]

LAST HOURS OF SESSION BUSY

CONGRESS EXPECTS TO ADJOURN TOMORROW.

SUPPLY BILLS CONSIDERED

LITTLE TAKEN UP IN SENATE BUT NECESSARY BUSINESS.

MAIL SUBSIDY AGAIN TALKED

House Once More Wrestles With Problem, Debate Running Well Into the Night—Remission of Portion of Chinese Indemnity Considered.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—When the Senate met today there was a general understanding that nothing would be done to delay the final adjournment of Congress, and that no legislation would be enacted beyond completing consideration of the great supply bills.

The net result of the day's session was the adoption of the conference agreement on the omnibus public buildings bill, and the approval of a partial agreement on the postoffice appropriation bill, the items in the latter measure relating to weighing the mails and ocean mail subsidy being sent back to conference.

Various questions were discussed during the day. Senator Teller reviewed court decisions on the limitations of federal power under the constitution and referred to a report that the President had stated in a letter that he would veto certain legislation if passed by Congress as an evidence of unwarranted encroachment upon the powers of the states.

Breach of Senate's Privilege.

Mr. Teller was followed by Mr. Bacon, who declared that the President's statement in his message of March 25 that he would veto any bill not guarding the right of the government to charge for power on navigable streams in connection with legislation respecting water power privileges, was a gross breach of the privilege of the senate. He said he would have introduced a resolution providing that this matter be considered by the committees on privileges and elections, but being a member of the minority he feared his act would have been regarded as partisan.

Mr. Owen of Oklahoma spoke on his joint resolution providing that an amendment to the constitution for the election of senators by the people be submitted to the states for ratification, and contended that the legislatures of 27 states, having voted in favor of that reform, the senators from those states should support his resolution. He moved a vote on the passage of the measure, but a motion to send it to the committee on privileges and elections was carried by a vote of 33 to 26.

Ineffectual efforts were made by Mr. Beveridge to pass the omnibus territories bill, and by Mr. Newlands to secure consideration of his resolution.

We are not trying to see how cheaply we can sell these dainty, stylish, finely-made undermuslins of ours to you, but necessity forces us to quote the lowest possible prices in order that there may be but few to move while the workmen are busy installing the new fixtures and making further improvements on our second floor. But you are more interested in the items themselves than in our reasons for this great sale, so we say that

The styles are distinguished by marked originality in design, by exquisite daintiness in trimming, by unusual sturdiness of fabrics and by superior workmanship. Seems almost like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

creating an inland waterways commission. At 5:30 p. m., just before the closing of the day's session, Mr. Hale announced an agreement made in executive session to take a recess until 8 p. m., with the understanding that the night session would be devoted exclusively to considering conference reports and such measures as could be taken up by unanimous consent. Mr. Hale had previously stated his belief that Congress could adjourn by 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. At 10:20 p. m. the Senate adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

Mail Subsidy Problem.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The House today again wrestled with the subject of mail subsidy to steamship companies and once more recorded itself against the proposition by the vote of 145 to 134. The debate ran well into the night. Having been overwhelmingly defeated yesterday, the conference on the postoffice appropriation bill today came into the House with a new report, agreeing with the Senate on everything except the subsidy provision and that relating to the system for weighing the mails. The portion of the report on which there was no dispute was adopted unanimously under an agreement to extend the time of debate on the subsidy question. The Senate amendment, changing the standard of weighing the mails by reducing the number of days which the weighing should be conducted, was snowed under, 94 to 186.

By reason of the action of the House in rejecting these amendments the bill again went back to conference for the third time, although the Senate already had agreed to the report. As soon as the action of the House was known in the Senate, Senator Penrose moved to recede from the remaining Senate amendments and discharge the conferees. The motion was carried and the congressional work on the postoffice bill was thus completed. The effect is to leave the mail subsidy provision out of the bill and thus effectually dispose of it for the present session.

Chinese Indemnity.

The joint resolution providing for the remission of a portion of the Chinese indemnity, arising out of the Boxer troubles in 1900, came up in the House today under suspension of the rules.

Mr. Denby of Michigan briefly rehearsed the incidents in connection with the outbreak and said that the proposed remission would be an act of supreme justice and generosity. China he said, already had paid on account of the indemnity of $24,400,000, the sum of $6,000,000, of which $2,000,000 had gone toward the liquidation of private claims. Mr. Denby assured the House that even with the remission of the $10,800,000, there would still remain ample funds from which to pay all claimants.

The action of the committee on foreign affairs in amending the resolution so as to increase by $2,000,000 the amount of the indemnity to be paid as well as providing for the review by the court of claims, of claims disallowed in whole or in part, was severely condemned by Mr. Stafford of Wisconsin.

The question is," said he, "whether Secretary Root shall be upheld or whether some claimant shall have the opportunity of looting the treasury."

The bill, as amended by the committee, was supported by Messrs. Perkins of New York, Howard of Georgia and Williams of Mississippi. So imbued was Mr. Williams with the justice of the measures, that he did not insist upon a roll call and it was passed.

Denver Gets $1,600,000.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—An agreement was reached late today by the conferees on the omnibus public buildings bill. Most of the important amendments made by the Senate were retained, although in some instances the amounts were reduced. Chief, among these are the following: For Salt Lake City, $175,000 was appropriated; Boise, Ida., $125,000; Missoula, Mont., $120,000; Riverside, Cal., $125,000; Everett, Wash., $130,000; Walla Walla, Wash., $140,000; San Francisco, $355,000; Denver, $1,600,000 for a general federal building, the house having appropriated only for a postoffice building.

ered around the big vacant lot wherein the great caterpillar-shaped air craft had been inflated with illuminating gas. It was just half past 11 o'clock when the stay ropes were cut and the airship rose slowly from the earth. The five gasoline engines, suspended beneath the big bag at intervals of probably 50 feet, each attended by an engineer were not put in operation until well up into the air, when two of them had slowly set in motion the long propellers reaching out from their sides. The engines were suspended independent of each other and the weight did not appear to be equalized, for before the ship could be propelled further than a few feet, the forward end tilted downward and the airship stood at an angle of 45 degrees, suspended in the air.

The engineers and the other members of the crew seemed to lose their heads and instead of running along the canvas pathway in order to equalize the weight and to right the airship, clung desperately to the netting and frail superstructure. The rush of the gas to the stern end of the long airship and the tremendous weight of engines and crew caused the none too substantial envelope to burst with a loud ripping noise. The release of a great quantity of gas allowed the airship to settle slowly towards the earth and for a few moments it looked as if it would come down slow enough to avoid any injury to the 16 men. Some of them lost their heads before the big machine could reach the ground and jumped. These escaped with broken limbs or severe bruises. Nearing the earth, however, the gas escaped with a rush and allowed the engines and the big bag to come down with great force. Morrell, the inventor of the craft, and several of the engineers, were thus caught and injured by the engines.

Panic in Crowd.

There was a panic in the big crowd that watched the ascension when the airship began to tilt. As it burst and fell towards the earth, women screamed and ran in fright in every direction. Several of them fainted and had to be cared for.

When the airship landed on the ground, hundreds of men rushed forward and with knives ripped the gas bag in a hundred places, cutting away the varnished material to get out the men buried underneath. The injured men were quickly rescued and taken to the Roosevelt and Oakland hospitals, where they are all doing well tonight with the exception of Rodgers. Who, it is believed, will succumb to his injuries.

J. A. Morrell has for a long time been engaged in building and exploiting his airship. He has extensively advertised that today's trial of the big craft, which was more than 400 feet long and 96 feet in diameter, was only a model of the one he intended to build, declaring that he would construct one 1,200 feet long and capable of carrying 500 passengers.

The big airship was not unlike, in form of construction, many of those experimented with in different parts of the country. It was a long torpedo-shaped affair, with blunt ends, round on top and sagging somewhat in the middle on the lower or under part. Five engines had been suspended by means of heavy network, and a narrow running board connected them. The engines were of the auto-gasoline type and each was attended by an engineer.

Morrell Was Warned

It is said that Morrell was warned by several experienced aerial navigators that the kind of bag he had provided would not stand the strain of the great weight placed upon it and that it would certainly explode if he attempted an ascension. Morrell was confident, however, that it was safe enough and so were all those who made the ascension today, including several photographers, anxious to secure aerial photographs.

The airship was out in the air just enough to determine whether it could be propelled and directed by the engines and the ten propellers, two driven by each engine. It was built at a cost said to be $40,000.

One of the thrilling sights of the accident was the daring efforts of John Byrne, the pilot, in his attempt to make a descent when the airship began its tilt downward. He clung to the rigging on top of the great gas bag and tried to reach the stern or upper end. Just as he got on top of the airship, however, the bag burst and began to fall. The break in the bag occurred only a few feet from where Byrne clung to the rigging and it looked as if he would be overcome by the escaping gas. He climbed upward however and when the big ship reached the ground he was clinging to the topmost point, trying to save himself from the fall and at the same time avoid the escaping gas. Byrne describes the accident and his experience as follows:

Describes Accident.

"I was riding on the back of the balloon and felt that we were making a great ascent, when suddenly I heard a 'pouff, pouff,' as if some one had blown a blast from a bellows. I felt the balloon quiver, stand still and then the gas under me began to rush toward the stern end. I knew if I stayed where I was that I would be swallowed up in the tangle of bag and wrecked machinery, so I climbed upward for life, where the gas was rushing out, but where there was still a foothold for me so that I could keep my head in the air and keep from smothering. When we landed I was on the tip end of the balloon and the bag made a cushion that broke my fall."

CITY HALL DARES COURT HOUSE TO PLAY BALL.

Strict Rules Promulgated—No Dynamite Allowed—Wooden Bats Required—Game Next Saturday.

There'll be something doing on the Colorado Springs High School athletic field next Saturday afternoon, if the county officials accept a humorously-worded challenge issued yesterday by the city officials, to play a baseball game on that date. The proceeds will be given to the Deaconess hospital building fund.

Aroused to action by announcements in The Gazette to the effect that the county players have organized and are putting in all their spare time on the diamond in preparation for the proposed game, the city officials took time by the forelock and "beat the county to it" by sending a challenge. The county officials are expected to accept, and more than was ever dreamed in official baseball guides will probably transpire next Saturday.

"First Aid to the Injured."

Taking all precautions, the city will have Dr. O. P. Hanford on hand with the hospital corps. Chief of Police W. S. Reynolds will afford ample police protection, and the only fights expected will be on the field of battle.

City Clerk E. C. F. Whittaker is "general manager" of the city forces, with Lester S. Bale, city chemist, captain of the team. Candidates on the city team are as follows: Mayor D. N. Heizer, Bale, Bob Madden, Bruce Maxwell, James Anthony and Joe Coffman of the health department; R. M. Webb, L. B. Compton, and J. F. Neff of the police and humane department; C. Earl Austin, assistant city engineer; Ray Ashworth, Dave Jolly and Charles Castello, engineer's office, and George M. Perry and Fred Parkill of the auditor's office.

To the Honorable Employes of the County of El Paso, State of Colorado, ss.: From the Redoubtable Employes of the City of Colorado Springs, State of Colorado, Greeting:

Rumor having wafted to our ears the report that some foolish or unknowing person has insinuated that the baseball team of the city hall is not yet the champion team of El Paso county that foolhardy members of El Paso county's forces have dared to hope to play in the same class with our athletes, we, the members of the baseball team of the city of Colorado Springs, while realizing that these statements were made by one not in the possession of his right senses; and, realizing that the baseball team of El Paso county is below our station in the baseball world, nevertheless, in order that the world may know to a man that the position of our team is unassailable and unassailed, and that they may have the privilege of witnessing the terrible punishment meted out to such reckless aspirations as are seemingly [illegible] the [illegible] ing; and, further, because we realize the worthy needs of the Deaconess hospital fund, and wish to help them in all honorable ways, [illegible] actions, and for reasons hereafter stated, we do hereby challenge the forces of El Paso county to meet the forces of Colorado Springs [illegible] with weapons as are herein designated, and at such time and place as we shall herein specify, provided the funds which may accrue from such a one-sided affair shall be presented to the Deaconess hospital fund, to be used as they may see fit.

or other harmful substances. They must be of regulation size and may be condemned by umpire for cause.

Bats must be of wood, of regulation size and shape. No timbers, loaded canes, wagon tongues, flat boards, tennis rackets or big sticks allowed.

The time of the combat shall be the afternoon of the 30th of May, 1908, at 2:30 p. m.

The place shall be the baseball field of the Colorado Springs High School, which school has very kindly loaned their grounds for our charitable enterprise.

Warning of the anger of our heroes is hereby given, and El Paso county will be expected to make arrangements for the succor of her injured.

The city of Colorado Springs will furnish ambulance and patrol accommodations. Transportation afforded only to those badly injured. Reputations must be kept from injury by owners thereof.

Notice is given that Chief of Police Reynolds will provide and personally superintend the protection of the umpire.

Notice is further given that ground rules specify that you tell your troubles to the policeman, that no more than four bases may be taken at once by one man for any cause whatsoever. All complaints against the umpire's decision shall be made in writing, and shall be delivered to the city attorney of the city of Colorado Springs, within one week after supposed discrimination.

Again stating that only the unbearable disgrace brought upon our name by your insinuations, and our desire to inflict crushing punishment for such foolhardiness and forwardness, together with our desire to help a worthy cause and institution, induces us to lower our standard by deigning to consider you as opponents, we beg to remain,

Yours very truly,
E. C. F. WHITAKER,
General Manager.

SPARKS' SECRETARY DEAD

CARSON, Nev., May 23.—W. R. Davis, private secretary to the late Gov. John Sparks, died at his home in this city today of stomach trouble. Through the death of Governor Sparks and his secretary, business in the state and federal buildings has been brought to a standstill.

BRIEF BITS OF NEWS

BOSTON, Mass., May 23.—Miss Catherine Roosevelt of this city, a relative of President Roosevelt, was thrown from her horse while jumping hurdles at the Country Club Horse show late today, the horse falling upon her and breaking her left ankle.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—Mgr. Garvey, rector of St. Charles Borromeo Roman Catholic seminary at Overbrook, a suburb of this city, died early this morning of pneumonia.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Francis Bowes Stevens, head of the Stevens family of Hoboken, N. J., and in his time an engineering authority of repute, died at his home in Hoboken tonight after a brief illness, aged 94.

ROME, May 23.—According to advices received at the Vatican, Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Farley intend to assist at the Eucharistic congress in London next September, coming afterward to Rome to visit the pope. It is expected that probably they will be present at the consistory, which will be held at the close of the papal jubilee.

CLEVELAND, O., May 23.—Secretary of War William H. Taft addressed the members of the Associated Western Yale clubs at a banquet tonight. The secretary confined himself to college topics.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Ray Alsworth, 21 years of age and a resident of Kansas City, Kan., was arrested tonight by the Chicago police on a charge of having passed worthless checks on various individuals in several states of the middle west.

Negro Evangelism.

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 23.—Negro evangelism was a theme at today's session of the general assembly of the southern Presbyterian church. The assembly finally adopted recommendations approving their interest in the evangelization of the negro and coming conferences between negro and white ministers and establishing Sunday schools for the negro under the direction of white teachers. The committee on the celebration next year of the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Calvin recommended that a memorial to Calvin be erected at Montreal, N. C., in a building to cost $25,000 and to serve the purpose of the summer conference.

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 23.—Notices of a wage reduction, to go into effect June 1, were posted at the Arlington cotton mills today. About 6,000 hands will be affected.

CALLING PEOPLE TO CHURCH.

Study Substitutes for the Familiar Bell—Flags, Drums and Bugles.

From the New York Tribune.

A Sunday or two ago the bells of Dulverton church, Somerset, being out of repair, the good folk of that town, a gateway of the Exmoor country of the wild red deer, were summoned to service by the blowing of a bugle by a local volunteer. The "church-going bell" is so universally used as the call to church that possibly few people are aware that on occasions and in various places sundry substitutes therefor have been pressed into the service of the church, says the London Globe. The bugle is certainly an unusual means of call, but a much stranger method used to be in vogue at a primitive little place called Fordon, perched high on the wolds of the East Riding of Yorkshire, remote from the noise and movement of the world. A well-known clergyman, some years ago, recorded that when he was in that district about 1870 for an archaeological purpose, he visited Fordon and found the tiny church built near the brow of a hill, and possessing neither bell turret nor bell. "The parson," he was told, "came over on horseback now and then from a neighboring parish, tied up his horse outside the church, put on his surplice, and then walked to the top of the hill and cracked his whip several times, and then we knaws as it's time to gang to chotch," said his informant on the spot. But this was a local eccentricity.

The instrument which preceded the bugle for signal purposes in military use—the drum—was once upon a time in America the customary Sunday monitor. Mrs. A. M. Earle, in one of her various admirable books on the conditions of social life in New England in early colonial days, gives a number of examples of the use of the drum as a signal for the gathering of the Puritan settlers for public worship. Bells seem to have been tried first, but they were small and ineffective, and the drum was preferred. At a Connecticut settlement the inhabitants, early in the seventeenth century, being assembled in the manner usual in those days, [illegible] the bell be rung noe more on the [illegible] beth daies, but the drum henceforth be beaten." At another village, in 1646, each household was called upon to pay a tax of fourpence or a peck of corn in order to pay the drummer for beating his drum every morning and at meeting or service time from the minister's house to the end of the settlement. An old Puritan hymn of much simplicity has the verse:

"New England's Sabbath Day
Is heaven-like, still, and pure.
When Israel walks the way
Up to the temple door.
The time we tell
When there to come
By beat of drum
Or sounding shell."

The allusion to the shell in the last line no doubt refers to the conch shell, which with the horn was used in some places as an alternative to the drum. The conch is, of course, largely used at the present day as an instrument of call in Hindu temples, on plantations and among savage tribes.

The use of the drum as a church signal was only a survival or continuation of earlier uses of the noisy instrument. "By the drum" was the phrase commonly employed several centuries ago to denote "by public announcement." The beating of a drum gave public notice of sales by auction; it preceded the crier's announcements, and accompanied the expulsion from the village or town of evil doers. The only survivals in our ordinary speech of today of these old customs are the phrase "to drum out of," meaning to expel with ignominy, and the American name of "drummer" for a commercial traveler—one who beats up customers and solicits orders. Although the latter use is generally recognized as an Americanism, it is worth noting that so long ago as 1827 it was used by Sir Walter Scott—"Some drummer of the trade" was his phrase—so that possibly, like other so-called Americanisms, it may be simply a survival over the water of older English phraseology.

But to return to the call to church. Another method has been the hoisting of a flag. At Kissingen, in Bavaria, the time of service at the little English church used to be notified—perhaps it still is—by the hoisting of a union jack on a flagstaff at the church door. And in New England long ago the flag was another alternative to the drum or bell, or was sometimes used in conjunction with the latter. For instance, at Plymouth, Mass., in 1697, the selectmen were required to "procure a flagg to be put out at the ringing of the first bell, and taken in when the last bell was rung." At Hartford, Conn., the meeting-house bell having broken, the [illegible] voted that John Edwards, at the charge of the Society, purchase Some Suitable Red bunting for a flagg to be Set on the State House to direct for meeting upon the publick Worship of God."

A CAUCASIAN WEDDING.

From the New York Tribune.

There are few countries that offer stranger or more interesting scenes at a marriage ceremony than Caucasia. Music precedes the bridal procession, a crowd on foot keeping it company. A merryman walks at the head of the procession, holding out a long wooden skewer in each hand. On one skewer are slices of bread, the other holds pieces of hot cooked meat cooling in the air. At the merryman's side trots a friend with a dripping wine skin under his arm. One foot of the skin is untied and held together only by finger and thumb. Every passerby on the road must drink and take his bit of meat and bread from the skewers. By doing this he is supposed to have enjoyed the kindly fruits of the earth and to have wished the bride happiness. Musicians ride in a cart before the bride's carriage, which is usually a bullock cart decorated with brilliant flowers, evergreens and colored ribbons. Round the top of the bride's head is a shining black ring, which appears much the same in effect as the ring that Zulu chiefs weave in their hair. On each side of her face long curls hang down. Over ring and curls floats a long white gauze veil trimmed with lace along the edge. At the bride's side sits the next prettiest girl in the village, to keep her in countenance and divide the gaze of too admiring men. The music continues while the marriage ceremony is being performed in the church. Boys keep up fantastic dancing at the church door. Then the procession reforms, the bridegroom climbs into the cart, seats himself beside the bride, and they go to their little house of wood and stone. Here the bridegroom lifts her out of the cart and carries her over the threshold into the scene of her new life.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and, while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. [illegible] This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages [illegible]

BIG DANCE TUESDAY NIGHT

Street Car Men Expect to Entertain Large Crowd.

Judging from the advance sale of tickets, which has been unusually large, a big crowd will attend the dance to be given at the Stratton park pavilion by the employes of the street car company next Tuesday evening. The dance, which was to have been held last Friday, was postponed to Tuesday because of inclement weather, and several hundred additional tickets have been sold during the last two days, thus assuring a successful event.

Professor H. T. Irvine's orchestra will play a selected program of waltzes and two-steps, and a good time is in store for all attending.

EL PASO ISSUES STATEMENT

Circular to Stockholders Gives Interesting Figures Regarding Operation of Mine.

The directors of the El Paso Consolidated Gold Mining company yesterday issued circulars to stockholders, announcing the financial progress of the company for the first three months of the year, and also giving information as to leases, the drainage tunnel and recent acts of the board.

There were 17 leases in operation on the property in January, 22 in February, and the same number in March. The average grade of ore shipped was $22.62 per ton and a total of $62,592.79 worth of ore was shipped during these three months. The lessees secured $31,079.22 of this amount. Shipping and selling expenses amounted to $18,560.33, which, together with other expenditures, left a net profit of $5,464.13 for the three months.

Important among the announcements by President S. S. Bernard is the following:

Will Ignore Burns.

"The present showing on the leases does not justify the statements and rumors put in circulation recently as to extreme richness or amount of ore uncovered. The leases are being operated with a fair degree of success and the management is satisfied that it is to the best interests of the company to continue the leasing operations, and an effort will be made to keep every foot of the company's ground above the water level under lease."

The last statement is the first official announcement that the directors will not accede to the demand of James F. Burns, a stockholder, that the leases be immediately canceled.

President Bernard then announces the appointment of an executive committee comprising himself, William Bainbridge and J. H. Avery, as published several days ago, and says that the committee will visit the mine once a week and give the operations their close personal attention.

Regarding the appointment of Wade H. Lott to succeed Mr. Bainbridge as mine superintendent, President Bernard says that Mr. Bainbridge was not a candidate to succeed himself and that he will continue a member of the board of directors, as well as acting on the executive committee.

The president also announces that the deep drainage tunnel was completed 2,345 feet on May 15 and that the intermediate shaft was sunk to a depth of 340 feet on that date.

TRANSFORMERS ARE HERE

New Lights Will Be Put in Within Few Days.

The transformers which the Colorado Springs Electric company will use in connection with the new 7.5 ampere arc lamps, have arrived in this city and are being installed with all possible speed. The company has received word that those parts of the lamps which the consigning firm neglected to send have been shipped by express. They are expected daily, and as soon as they are received the electric company will at once install them in place of the present 6.5 ampere lamps. The work will be completed within a few days after June 1, according to the company's plans.

Plans and specifications are being drawn for the company's projected improvements at the substation on West Cucharas street. Actual construction work will begin shortly, and will be pushed so that the new generating station and other improvements will be ready for use this fall.

REFUSES TO PAY FINE

WHITAKER SAYS HE WILL FIGHT IN COURTS.

Says He Didn't Violate Rules Personally and Water Department Hasn't Power to Punish Him.

The validity of the assessment of fines by the water department of this city, for violation of its rules regarding lawn sprinkling, may be tested in the courts. City Clerk E. C. P. Whitaker of 728 North Wahsatch avenue, whose hose was recently found running without a nozzle, was notified by the water department that he must pay a fine of $25 or his water would be turned off. Mr. Whitaker says that he will not pay the fine unless assessed in court, and that otherwise he will carry the case to the court of highest resort. "If they try to turn off my water," he said last night, "I will apply for an injunction restraining the act."

Mr. Whitaker bases his attitude on two grounds. He says that in the first place the water was turned on by a young man who rooms at his house, without his knowledge or consent, and that he (Whitaker) knew nothing of the act until the running hose had been seen by an inspector.

"This young man thought he would do me a kindness by turning on the water so that the lawn would be benefited during the hour allotted to my section of the city," said Mr. Whitaker. "He did not act as an agent, but simply turned on the water of his own accord. Owing to the theft of numerous nozzles in our neighborhood, I always take off the nozzle at night and hide it, which accounts for the hose running open.

"Furthermore, the sprinkling of a lawn through a nozzle of more than a quarter of an inch in diameter is provided for in the city ordinances, together with the penalty therefor, and the fine should be imposed in court, instead of by the water department."

JURY SAYS IT MADE MISTAKE

Meant to Make Conacher-Ferguson Claims Offset Each Other, but Erred.

For the first time in the history of a court in this state, so far as known, members of a jury have declared that their verdict was a mistake. E. H. Joslyn, H. S. Ashley, George Riter, W. H. Dyer and D. T. Morris, five of the 12 members of the jury which recently returned a verdict of $138.75 for the defendant in the case of Dr. J. H. Ferguson against Ainslee Conacher, filed an affidavit in the district court yesterday to the effect that their verdict was not rendered as intended.

Dr. Ferguson sued Conacher for the exact amount which the jury decided was due Conacher. The physician claimed this as fees for medical services rendered Mrs. Conacher, now dead. Conacher brought a counter suit against Dr. Ferguson for $5,000 damages, alleging that the defendant's carelessness caused the death of Mrs. Conacher.

The five jurymen, in their affidavit, declare that it was the intention of the jury to allow Conacher the amount claimed by Dr. Ferguson, so as to offset the physician's claim for fees, instead of allowing Conacher a bonus, as was actually done, and that the jurymen meant to have the claims cancel each other.

The judgment of Judge Morris will probably be changed to conform with the amended verdict.

TO SEE SIGHTS OF STATE

Railroads Will Induce People to Travel More.

A united effort is being made by the railroad men of Colorado Springs, Denver, Glenwood Springs, Fort Collins, Trinidad and other cities in the state to induce the people of Colorado to travel and visit the points of scenic interest in their own state so that they may be better able to give information to visitors from elsewhere. At a meeting of railroad men and resort owners held in Denver yesterday, plans for a campaign of education were discussed with the result that the railroads will make a concerted effort to get Colorado people to become better acquainted with the beauties of their own state.

Among the railroad men present at the meeting was Frederick Matthews, general freight and passenger agent of the Short Line in this city.

ANARCHISTS MUST GO

Government Will Deport Undesirable Characters.

As a result of investigations by special government immigration agents who are said to have found a startling state of affairs regarding the numerous suspicious foreigners in Colorado, the government has ordered the wholesale deportation of these characters, and Immigration Agent Louis Adams of Denver, representative for Colorado, will arrive in Colorado Springs this week, in connection with his tour of the state in this regard.

More than 500 foreigners, it is said, will be deported from this state alone as soon as the government officials can act on their cases. There are nearly 50 undesirable aliens in Denver alone who are being held by the police on charges ranging from vagrancy to murder. This city is particularly free from suspicious characters, as compared with other towns in the state, but will be included in the drag net in the government's efforts to rid the nation of anarchistic residents.

REAL BUILDING BOOM

20 RESIDENCES TO BE BUILT BY ONE COMPANY.

Many Improvements in Business Section of City—Real Estate Active.

Trading has been active in real estate circles during the last week and in addition to the steady buying and selling there have been important announcements of new buildings.

The decision of the Exchange National bank to erect a large business block to cost $300,000 served to stimulate activity. The proposed building will be one of the largest and finest of its kind in the state outside of Denver.

The Colorado Investment and Realty company has announced that it will spend $100,000 in new residences, the plan being to erect 20 modern cottages in the block lying between Uintah and San Miguel on Corona street. It is stated that work will begin tomorrow on the foundations. The residences will cost between $3,500 and $4,500 each and will contain from five to eight rooms, with all modern conveniences. The new residence district will be made one of the prettiest in the city.

General improvements in all lines continue in the business districts. The epidemic that was called by one real estate man "frontitis" is unabated, and the new fronts are still being added to many stores on the principal business streets.

Many Sales.

Several realty dealers report excellent business during the last week. Wills, Spackman and Kent state that north end property is especially active. They report deals in residence property aggregating $13,000. Among the sales the company reports is the double dwelling house at 14-16 East Willamette avenue, from Benjamin Atkins to C. W. Jenkins. The cosideration was $5,000. Both persons live in New York and the purchase was made for investment. Professor J. M. Howe, of Colorado College, purchased from Mrs. Anna Townbridge a modern eight-room house at 1811 North Nevada avenue. The consideration in this case was also $5,000. Professor Howe will occupy the property as a residence. Mrs. Emily Brandt purchased from Lucien F. Curtis a residence at 519 North Cedar street. The consideration was $3,000.

MEMORIAL SERVICES TONIGHT

Dr. James B. Gregg Will Preach to G. A. R. Veterans at Congregational Church

The annual memorial services of Colorado Springs post No. 22, G. A. The veterans will assemble at the G. A. R. hall at 7:30 o'clock in the evening and march in a body to the church, where seats will be reserved for them. The arrangements for the Memorial day exercises to be held on May 30 are in the hands of a joint committee from the G. A. R., the W. R. C. and the Ladies of the G. A. R.

LABORER FOUND DEAD ON BED

Frank D. Warnex, Stranger in City, Dies in Rooming House Probably From Pueblo.

The dead body of Frank D. Warner, 45 years of age, a stranger in this city, was found by the landlady, Mrs. Mary Denton, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, lying on a bed in a rooming house at 22 East Huerfano street. The last seen of the man alive was on Friday night, when he went to his room and lay down on top of his bed with his overcoat on. Yesterday morning Mrs. Denton heard him breathing heavily, but did not disturb him, thinking that he wished to sleep. Becoming alarmed in the afternoon at his failure to put in an appearance, she entered his room and found his dead body on the bed.

Coroner D. F. Law was at once notified, and after making an investigation, gave it as his opinion that the man had died of pneumonia and asthma. It is known that he complained of being troubled with the latter disease. The body was taken to the Fairley and Law undertaking rooms, where it now lies awaiting word from friends, who are supposed to live at 305 Santa Fe avenue, Pueblo, as the man had letters on his person addressed to him at that place. He was an emery grinder by trade, and from letters on his person, is known to have been recently in Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fort Collins, Boulder, and other cities in this state.

Warner came to Colorado Springs Wednesday night and rented the room in which he died.

Late last night the police learned from the Pueblo authorities that Warner was well known by a man named Richard Butler of Denver, an employe of a laundry, who stated that Warner was a member of the Warner family well known as the manufacturers of a patent medicine and that he has a son who is a cashier in a bank in Pennsylvania.

No arrangements for the funeral have been made, and the body will be held by the coroner until the man's friends or relatives have been heard from.

We are now placing in our salesrooms some extraordinary reproductions of the highest quality and workmanship of

CHIPPENDALE AND SHERATON FURNITURE

The collection embraces largely dining room pieces, a Sheraton dining room suite complete of great value, and many chairs copied exactly from the originals in the famous Dr. Crim collection of Baltimore, which was recently sold at public sale, fetching enormous prices. We offer these choice styles at our uniform low prices; prices that we guarantee to be lower than many of the big eastern cities. We solicit the attention of the most experienced buyers to the great variety and choice quality of our large stock, and to the system of uniform low prices upon which our success has so largely depended.

MOST SUICIDES IN VIENNA.

More Men Than Women—Greatest Number Last April.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

Among all the European capitals Vienna has long enjoyed an unenviable pre-eminence for its number of suicides.

Unfortunately, the figures for last year tend to enhance this reputation. The official records show that 365 men and 108 women committed suicide, as compared with 315 men and 119 women in 1906, a total increase of 39. Besides this, there were no fewer than 739 attempts at suicide, 441 by men and 298 by women.

The preponderance of men over women appears somewhat striking—three to one—but taking the cases of actual suicides and attempts together, this proportion is reduced to less than two to one. Illness and mental disorders were responsible for more than a fourth of the total suicides; unhappy love affairs accounted for 25, poverty for 32 and dissatisfaction with their surroundings for 35.

The highest number of suicides took place in April, 61, and the lowest in May and September, with 31 each.

AN "ORANGE BLOSSOM" RECEPTION

St. Augustine, Fla., Dispatch to the New York Herald.

Society was most active Tuesday, social events succeeding each other rapidly. Mrs. William W. Dewhurst held an "orange blossom" reception in the morning, receiving in a rose covered pergola decorated with orange blossoms. Refreshments were served at tables beneath orange trees. The rose garden was beautiful with thousands of blooms. Each guest received a bunch of orange blossoms as a souvenir.

Mrs. George Fletcher gave a St. Patrick luncheon in the Ponce de Leon. Eighteen covers were laid at tables decorated in green, relieved by white alyssum. Tiny green electric light bulbs lighted a graceful centerpiece of palms and wild fig tree foliage. Shamrocks and alyssum were arranged between this and the plates. Plate cards and menus were decorated with shamrocks.

OUR DISAPPEARING FORESTS.

Representative Philo Hall of South Dakota.

Not until we pause and consider that our reproduction of forest trees is so sadly neglected that we cut each year three times the annual growth; not until we realize that each year 125,000,000,000 feet of lumber is cut, a cut which means over 10,000,000,000 feet a month, over 333,000,000 feet a day and over 13,000,000 feet each of the 24 hours of the day; not until we remember that by our tariff laws we are keeping out reinforcements to protect our timber supply from exhaustion do we begin to realize the appalling fact that the sands which number the hours of our forests are falling fast; that from the snow-clad hills of northern Minnesota to the sun-kissed shores of the Gulf, from the wave-beaten rocks of Maine to California's Golden Gate the cold steel of the tree butcher's axe is ringing the death knell of our once proud American forest tree.

The father of the house of commons, succeeding the late Sir Campbell-Bannerman, will probably be J. G. Talbot, who speaks with great weight on church matters, having been an ecclesiastical commissioner and a royal commissioner on church discipline.

Among the acting church wardens of the Anglican Church in England are the Viscountess Exmouth and the Marchioness of Exeter.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliance vanish like the bloom from a flower which is rudely handled. The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. Few young women appreciate the shock of the system through the change which comes with marriage and motherhood. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant pelvic drains and weaknesses which too often come with marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its fairness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate womanly organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and form at once witness to the fact in renewed comeliness. More than a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well. Ingredients on label—contains no alcohol or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is made wholly of those native, American, medicinal roots most highly recommended by leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken-down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and make its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as "Favorite Prescription." It can do no harm in any condition of the system. It is a most potent invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine, nicely adapted to woman's delicate system by a physician of large experience in the treatment of woman's peculiar ailments.

Bad Symptoms. The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has gnawing distress or heavy full feeling in stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weaknesses and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not result fatally.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a professional indorsement of each of its several ingredients—worth more than any number of ordinary non-professional testimonials. The very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments are to its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and attested under oath as complete and correct.

In any condition of the female system Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of the "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure tumors—no medicine will. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Doctor's All Agree. The most eminent writers on Materia Medica, whose works are consulted as authorities by physicians of all the different schools of practice, extol, in the most positive terms, the curative virtues of each and every ingredient entering into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In fact it is the only medicine, put up for sale through druggists for the cure of all diseases of the mucous surfaces, as nasal catarrh, throat, laryngeal, and bronchial affections attended by lingering, or hang-on-coughs that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any amount of lay or non-professional testimonials.

Do not expect too much from the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will not work miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. Nor is the "Discovery" so good for a sudden attack of acute cough, but for the lingering, obstinate, hang-on-coughs, accompanying catarrhal, throat, laryngeal and bronchial affections, with a threatening symptom. In cases accompanied with wasting of flesh, night-sweats, weak stomach and poor digestion with faulty assimilation, and which, if neglected or badly treated are apt to lead to consumption, the "Discovery" has proven wonderfully successful in effecting cures.

The formula is printed on every wrapper of "Golden Medical Discovery," sworn to as to correctness under oath, and you can't afford to accept any substitute of unknown composition for this non-secret remedy no matter what selfish interests may prompt the dealer to urge such upon you. In fact it is an insult to your intelligence for him to do so. You know what you want and it is his place to supply that want.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original "Little Liver Pills" first put up by old Dr. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. They cleanse, invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels, curing biliousness and constipation. Little sugar-coated granules—easy to take as candy.

Dr. Pierce may be consulted by letter free of charge. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Send to Dr. Pierce as above.

L. SHAW TAKES FIRST

WINS INTERSCHOLASTIC ORATORICAL CONTEST.

East and West Denver High Schools Get Second and Third, Respectively.

In the annual interscholastic oratorical contest held in Perkins hall last night, Lloyd Shaw of the Colorado Springs High School added to the splendid record in oratory already made by that institution by capturing the first prize, a twenty-dollar gold piece. His subject was "False Gods," and his oration was one of the best ever delivered in a similar contest. Henry G. Frankel of the East Denver High school won second prize, $10 in gold, and Emmet Lee of the West Denver High school was awarded the third prize, $5. Frankel's subject was, "Our Duty to the Philippines," and Lee's was "Practical Patriotism." The standard of all three orations was conceded to be above the average and the judges, the Rev. C. S. Rich, S. F. Hamp and Henry Trowbridge, found some difficulty in awarding the prizes as all the contestants gave excellent orations.

Young Orators Complimented.

Other orations in the contest were delivered by Maurice D. Kobey of the Manual Training High school, on "The Trend of Trusts;" Roscoe West of the South Canon City High school, on "The Pioneer of the West;" Henry L. Larsen, Littleton High school, on "Colorado's Progress;" Harold Davis of the Canon City High school, on "Westward the Star of Empire Takes Its Way," and Carey Campbell of the Monte Vista High school, on "The Leadership of Educated Men." The prizes were awarded by the vote of the three judges and the presentations were made by Principal J. W. Park of Cutler Academy, who presided.

In presenting the prizes he took occasion to compliment all the contestants on their efforts and said that he had never listened to more commendable orations than were delivered.

Loving Cups Awarded.

A feature of the evening was the awarding of the loving cups won by the Colorado Springs High School in the field meet last year and yesterday. These trophies were also presented by Principal Park.

Besides the orations a very excellent program of music and songs was given with F. S. Moore presiding at the organ. Among those who took part in this feature of the program was George Hemus, who sang two numbers. Several selections were given on the organ by Mr. Moore.

ANOTHER HEAVY RAINFALL

Precipitation in City Up to 8 o'Clock Last Night Was Close to Half an Inch.

Farmers and stockmen in El Paso county had further cause for rejoicing yesterday, when another heavy rain fell. A precipitation of .02 of an inch was recorded at the Colorado College weather bureau up to 6 o'clock last evening, but a heavy fall during the next two hours brought the total precipitation for the day up to .42 of an inch at 8 o'clock last night. The precipitation at Lake Moraine was .10 of an inch at 6 o'clock last evening.

As a result of the cessation of lawn sprinkling by consumers during the last two days, the water in Lake Moraine has practically maintained its level. The barometer at the lake did not fall yesterday, contrary to hopes based on its decline Friday, and the expected snow storm did not materialize.

DIABOLO GIRL APPEARS.

From the New York Press.

Not until the advertisers use a game in illustrating the announcements of their wares can it be considered really popular. The newest pictures in the backs of magazines show girls and children playing diabolo. Evidently the illustrators find the game lends itself to aesthetic drawings, for they are taking it up all 'round. The figures in the illustrations published thus far certainly have grace, though it is conceivable that there are positions of fleeting awkwardness in the pastime. Diabolo succeeds golf in the affection of the artists. It is not so long since the game of the links was worked to death in advertising illustrations. The golf girl was shown in every possible pose, and a good many that were impossible. Before golf, tennis had the vogue. That is a really graceful game, and the maid with the racquet didn't have to try hard to look attractive. She was preceded by the croquet girl, who followed the girl with grace hoops. Way back in the misty, musty past there was the battledore and shuttlecock girl, and further the memory of man runneth not.

AMERICANS AND FRENCHMEN

From the New York Sun.

It was in one of New York's largest restaurants. The experienced waiter, like most of his fellows, something of a cosmopolite, encouraged to do a little talking, was voicing some of his observations in the line of his business.

"Twould be hard to convince me that Americans are 'kickers,'" he said, "although it's often said they are. I am French, and I've worked in several countries, but I had rather wait on 25 Americans—in this country, anyway—than on one Frenchman. The Frenchman not only knows exactly what he wants, but in a French restaurant, whether here or elsewhere, he knows exactly what he ought to get, and he insists upon having it, insists on what we Americans call the worth of his money. The American, on the other hand, generally speaking, will take what you give him; no doubt partly because he will not spend the time necessary for changing dishes or for cooking them over.

"And if the truth must be told, he usually tips more liberally. I never understood so well until I came to work here a story that was told me in Switzerland of the American who was charged 15 francs for trout when they could scarcely be said to be out of season. He called the landlord and questioned the price, saying: 'Trout are not rare now.'

"'No,' said the landlord, 'but Americans are.' I know now what the landlord meant."

The Des Moines presbytery will be represented at the semi-centennial of the United Presbyterian church at Pittsburg by the Rev. T. C. McCaughan of Winterset, ninety-four years of age, the oldest minister of the denomination in this country.

The parish of Hambledon, in Surrey, England, has been without a rector for over a year because the living is worth but $1,000 and the rectory is so badly in need of repairs that it would cost the occupant at least $7,000 to make it habitable.

NEWS OF THE LOCAL COURTS

Judge W. S. Morris will hear motions in the district court tomorrow morning. Tuesday, Judge Owen will again call the civil docket.

Judge Robert Kerr of the juvenile court yesterday committed George Howell, a 13-year-old colored boy, to the Golden reform school. Howell was convicted of incorrigibility.

Harry Pobst, who was tried in the county court here on request of the Teller county authorities, was adjudged insane yesterday and was ordered committed to the Work sanitarium in Pueblo by Judge Robert Kerr. Pobst admitted on the stand yesterday that he tried to break into the Cheyenne apartments in this city several days ago, giving as his reason that he thought he might find the town of Divide in the apartments. He gravely assured the court that he was born about 3,000 years ago. Pobst is 24 years old.

Alleging desertion, Mary Emory filed suit in the county court yesterday for divorce from Algernon Emory. The couple were married in Youngstown, O., June 12, 1906.

A jury in the county court yesterday returned a verdict for $560.54 in favor of the First Cumberland Presbyterian church, in its suit against W. D. Marlow to recover the principal and interest of a note for $500, executed several years ago. The verdict is in favor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, which is now united with the Presbyterian church of the United States.

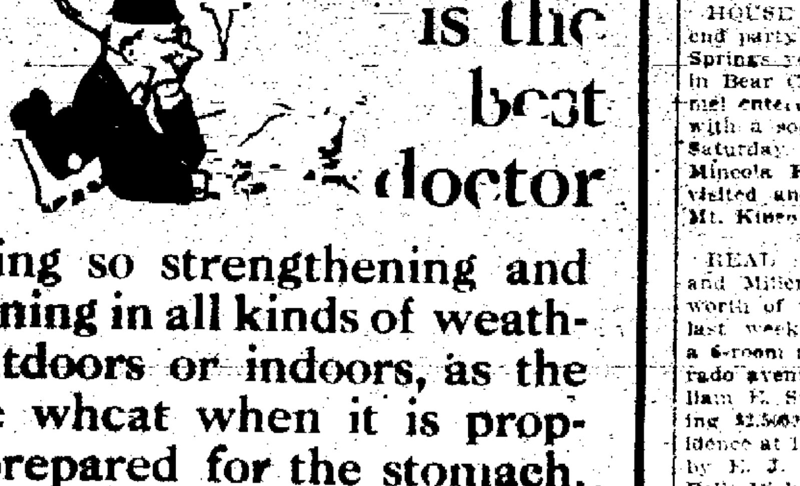

HOTEL COLORADO TO OPEN MAY 28

During the few months just past many improvements have been made in the big hotel Colorado at Glenwood Springs. The building and grounds are now in first class shape and Manager E. E. Kineo to see the sun rise.

REAL ESTATE DEALS—Warner and Miller report the sale of $6,700 worth of west side residence property last week. Among their sales were a 6-room modern cottage at 1003 Colorado avenue from A. E. Ford to William E. Swartz, the consideration being $2,500. The modern 8-room residence at 1108 Colorado avenue was sold by E. J. Morse to C. D. Crews and Belle Dickenson for $4,250.

CORRECTION—From H. D. L. Morse of Colorado City it is learned that the report of the death of Mrs. H. C. Morse in Santa Ana, Cal., was incorrect, the name of the dead woman being Mrs. Horace Morse, mother-in-law of Mrs. H. C. Morse. H. C. Morse was formerly a real estate dealer in this city and is now in the same business at Long Beach, Cal.

HUGE CIGARS.

From the New York Press.

William H. Lee showed me a case of cigars. It contained 16 that were 16 inches long and 2 that were 24, the largest ever imported into New York. The price is about $1 an inch. But nobody except Tod Sloan ever smokes such monsters. They are for exhibition only.

Manitou News

Week-end parties from Denver, Pueblo and other cities in the state to Manitou are becoming more and more popular and a large number from Denver will spend today at the Cliff house. The drive from Denver can be made in a touring car in from two to three hours, which gives the parties ample time to get to Manitou after business hours on Saturday. Sunday can be spent in taking in the many attractive drives in the district and the parties usually visit over until Monday morning to return home. The Cliff house is making special efforts to entertain these week-end parties and it is expected that when the season opens the business in this line will be very largely increased.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kelly and family all of Denver are guests at the Cliff house.

A number of improvements are being made at the Navajo hotel and the rooms are being thoroughly renovated in preparation for the opening which will take place about June 1.

The new theater constructed by J. G. Hiestand at the Iron Springs pavilion has been completed and will be opened for vaudeville and moving picture shows shortly after June 1. Mr. Hiestand has spent several thousand dollars in improving his popular resort.

SAYS THERE IS NO HOPE

Pueblo Negro in Jail Here Expects to Be Hanged.

James Lynn, colored, the alleged murderer who is held in the El Paso county jail to await trial in Pueblo for the killing of 16-year-old Sarah James and wounding her mother, Mrs. Julia James, white, says that he knows he is doomed to hang because he is a negro, and that he will either be lynched or sentenced to death.

Lynn insists that he did not kill the girl or injure her mother, and claims that the bullets which did the deadly work were of 32 caliber. He says that he used a 44-caliber revolver in his fight with O'Neill on the night of the murder. This statement is supported by the fact that when arrested at Limon, Lynn carried a 44-caliber revolver.

The prisoner can neither read nor write, and spends most of his time praying in his cell.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

The senior class held a surprise picnic in North Cheyenne canon last Monday night. The committee on arrangements was composed of Alice England, Flora Crowley, Ray Sayre and Gerald Seldomridge.

Invitations for the commencement exercises will be issued this week. A committee consisting of Ramona Brady, Eleanor Thomas and Ray Sayre will have charge of the exercises.

Eileen Tobey, a member of the sophomore class, has gone to Decatur, Ill., to live.

The three football pennants have arrived. No definite date has been set for their presentation.

The sophomore class has decided to have a hay ride in North Cheyenne canon next Tuesday night. The committee on arrangements is made up of Walter Thomas, Roland Boynton, Ernest Richmond, Ruth Davis and Florence Stephens.

Birdie Dallincourt has gone east on account of her grandmother's illness.

No definite arrangements have been made for the annual junior-senior reception. The difficulty has been to secure a house, but the reception will be held and is expected to be the best social event of the year.

The Omega society gave a "spread" in the physical laboratory last Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Amy Ahrens and Miss Ruth Woods. Miss Ahrens leaves for Germany tomorrow with her mother and Professor Edwin Deitrich and family. While in Europe Miss Ahrens will study under the most eminent violinists of Berlin. Miss Woods leaves for her home in Missouri.

The Brown and White, consisting of 128 pages and 300 cuts, will be out June 10.

Undoubtedly Works Wonders for Sick Men

Undoubtedly the following prescription will work wonders for that great class of men who, through folly or dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their "second childhood" long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments are reached.

Coming from a source of unquestioned authority on the ailments of men it is presumed to be infallible, and the profession generally indorse it as highly efficient in quickly restoring in "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality, melancholia and the functions. It is published now with the full authority of the originator for the benefit of the shipwrecked lives that find life not worth the living.

First get fifty cents' worth of "compound fluid Balmwort" in a one-ounce package, and "three ounces syrup Sarsaparilla compound;" take home, mix and let stand two hours; then get "one ounce compound essence Cardiol," and "one ounce Tincture Cadomene." Mix all in a six or eight ounce bottle, shake well and take one teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring, followed by a drink of water.

To insure quick circulation of the blood, necessary to promote the quick action of the treatment, a hot salt water bath should be taken nightly if convenient. It is said by those who have been treated by this eminent pathologist that astonishing nerve power and vigor is well worth the large fees which he charges.

By mixing it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's shortcomings, and expensive fees are avoided. Some druggists may not have all these rare concentrated preparations, but they can easily obtain of wholesale stock who always have them ... to ... by doctors.

NEW COAL COMPANY FORMED

Purchasers of Preferred Stock Entitled to Receive Fuel at Actual Cost.

The Cottonwood Coal and Power company, owning 320 acres of coal land adjoining that of the Pikes Peak Fuel company northeast of this city, is being incorporated by Mayor D. N. Heizer, H. B. Neff, George H. Gantz and D. W. Thomas, to conduct a general coal business. The capital stock is $750,000, divided into 150,000 shares of a par value of $5 each. Of the entire capitalization, 90,000 shares will be used as common and 60,000 shares as preferred stock.

All purchasers of preferred stock will be entitled to receive coal at cost, according to a circular sent out by the company, and each block of 10 shares of preferred stock carries with it a purchasing certificate for 12 tons of coal per year at actual cost of production and delivery. This stock will be sold only in blocks of 10 shares, or multiples of 10. Holders of preferred stock, in addition to the privilege named, will share equally with the holders of common stock in the division of the dividends of the company. The office of the company, of which H. B. Neff is trustee, is at 18 Midland block, this city.

THE FRUIT CROP.

Despite the Late Frosts, Dealers Predict a Bountiful Supply of Small Fruits at a Price Within the Reach of All.

A glut in the fruit market is hardly probable in this section, but reports from eastern and southern growers would indicate that we will be able to enjoy small fruits and berries at a very moderate price.

How to eat berries and enjoy them: To suggest that some persons cannot eat raw fruit as it comes from the garden without stomach distress may seem almost unpatriotic, for every American thinks it is a patriotic duty to eat good old-fashioned fruits and berries whether they "agree" with him or not. It is a fact, however, that many persons cannot eat them without discomfort. The full enjoyment of the delicious berry is denied to thousands whose stomachs do not take kindly to the peculiar acid and the numberless little seeds which they contain. For these persons the soggy white flour dough of "shortcakes" makes a bad matter even worse. Almost any person whose stomach has not gone out of business entirely can eat berries and shredded wheat biscuit with perfect safety and fullest enjoyment. The best way to prepare them is to heat the biscuit in an oven until the shreds are crisp, then crush a cavity in the top of the biscuit and fill this with the berries in their own juices; then pour milk or cream over it and sweeten to suit the taste. There is something about the porous shreds that neutralizes the fruit acid and the combination makes a most wholesome and delicious dish—more easily digested and much more nutritious than the ordinary shortcake.

You can make the same wholesome combination with raspberries or any kind of fresh fruit. A favorite summer noon-day dish at the Union League club of Chicago is made by partly filling a small bowl with red raspberries, then covering with a layer of Shredded Wheat crumbs (made by crushing two crisp Biscuits in the hand), then adding a little cream and sugar. Such a lunch is wholesome and easily digested. The Shredded Wheat itself contains more real nutriment than meat or eggs and costs much less while the fruit adds to its healthfulness and palatability. A more ideal summer diet could not be imagined.

SANITARIUM AT BOULDER IS IDEAL PLACE FOR INVALIDS

The Place sanitarium at Boulder, by force of thorough merit and reputation, takes rank as one of the leading institutions of its kind in Colorado. Under the direction of its president, Dr. O. G. Place, who combines 18 years of active experience in the famous Battle Creek sanitarium with several years of study and research in Europe, the institution has been, from the first, a thorough success. Specializing on the complaints of women and children and nervous affections, the Place sanitarium offers every help that advanced science has been able to give to the aid of sufferers. The sanitarium is a private institution, and has all the advantages that perfect quiet, personal supervision by a trained corps of physicians and nurses, scenic atractions and the perfect climate of Colorado can give to patients.

MRS. ATKINSON ANSWERS

Case Has Been Continued Until June 4.

Mrs. Mary Atkinson filed an answer in the county court yesterday, showing cause why she should not be held in contempt of court for taking possession of an electric automobile after A. Jae Ward, with whom she contests the property, after Ward had executed a redelivery bond to the court for the machine. Mrs. Atkinson denies that Ward ever executed a redelivery bond with two good securities, as required by law, and alleges that one surety is not worth the amount of the bond in property which is not exempt from execution. In her answer, Mrs. Atkinson also claims that Ward filed the affidavit requesting her citation for contempt of court merely to annoy her. The case was continued to June 4.

MANY WILL ATTEND—The following Colorado Springs men will attend the annual meeting of the Arkansas Valley Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers to be held in Pueblo Wednesday and Thursday: Doctor James B. Gregg, First Congregational church; Prof. H. F. Smith, of Colorado College; the Rev. F. W. Hullinger, Colorado City Congregational church; Prof. E. S. Parsons, Colorado college; the Rev. J. W. Corson, the Rev. G. L. Patterson, Hill-side Congregational church; the Rev. A. W. Moore, Second Congregational church.

TO SPEAK AT Y. M. C. A.—At the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, an address on "The Savior Is Passing By," will be given by the Rev. ... Jarvis.

TWO COMPANIES FORMED

Will Operate in Western Part of the State.

Copies of the articles of incorporation of the Florida Mesa Reservoir and the Florida Canal Development companies, operating in La Plata county, were filed with the county clerk yesterday by C. Sharpless Pastorius, W. J. Chinn and J. Alfred Ritter, all of this city. The principal office of the two companies, which are controlled by the same men, will be in Durango with a branch office in Colorado Springs.

The organizations will do a general water and power business. The Florida Mesa Reservoir company is capitalized for $50,000, divided into 500 shares of a par value of $100 each. The Florida Canal Development company has a capitalization of $150,000, divided into 1,500 shares of a par value of $100 each. The three incorporators are also the directors of both companies, together with Horace E. Pastorius and A. C. Hedgett.

NEW THOUGHT—At the New Thought meeting to be held in the Temple theater at 11 o'clock this morning, William Scott will speak on the subject of "The Hidden Mystery."

A STUDY CONTINUED

Following out the line of thought of our last write-up, the thought occurs to me that it seems very strange that so little stress has heretofore been given to the part that oxygen plays in keeping the lungs in good condition, and in healing them after they become diseased. If the lungs could always be provided with the proper amount of pure air, so that they could appropriate the three elements of the air, oxygen, hydrogen and nitrogen, it would be almost safe to say that tuberculosis would not exist. Since this is true, manifestly the way to cure consumption is to provide air in its natural form, if possible, but if that is not possible, then provide it as nearly in its natural state as posible, and add to it such other elements as will aid it in so enriching the blood as that the diseased portions of the lungs may be healed thereby. When a physician in the east sends his patient suffering with tuberculosis to Colorado, he does so because he wants the air cells expanded, and he wants perfectly pure air for his patient to breathe that will be just as dry as it may be. Following out this line of thought, several years ago I devised a machine that does for the lungs what the air in the high altitude does, that it provide it as nearly in its natural state as possible for the lungs to take in more air, and the medicine that is inhaled through it sets free oxygen when it comes in contact with the air passages. In those cases that can not come to this climate it does for them in the low altitude very much what the high altitude is expected to do, and in these cases who have come to this altitude and have not improved, or in these cases that have come here and improved at first and after a while lost their improvement, it comes in to aid the climate in doing what it can almost do but not quite. In other words it increases the capacity of the lung structure, aids in drying up the secretions and in this way prevent the disease from spreading into the healthy lung tissue. Nearly 7-10 of all the cases I take are those who have failed to get well in this climate, and who realize that the climate is doing them very little good, notwithstanding the fact that it has no doubt saved their lives, but it can not cure them without aid. So with this treatment, which is known as the Shepard Treatment we succeed in healing a very large per cent of the second and third stage cases that we undertake to treat, so that they can go back to their homes with perfect safety. It is pretty difficult to explain in one of these write ups just the process that is used to accomplish these very desirable results. It will therefore pay for you to come to the offices, which are in the Barnes building, and look the matter over and decide for yourself whether this method is what you want or not. It is so plain and simple that any one can understand it, and so reasonable, and successful, that those who apply it become very enthusiastic about it. Office hours from 10:00 to 12:00 a. m., and 2:00 to 5:00 p. m.

Yours very truly,

DR. W. A. SHEPARD

PREVENTION OF WATER WASTE.

FRIDAY'S rainfall relieved the water situation considerably, but, as the news columns of The Gazette have already told the public, the relief was only temporory, and very slight at that. Economy is still as necessary as ever, and water users must be kept to a strict accounting by the department. Two things the rain did; it stopped all forest fires, which at one time threatened to be quite serious and of permanent injury to our watershed; and it obviated the necessity for sprinkling for a few days. We have no doubt there were people who sprinkled yesterday; but there was no need of it, and will be none for a day or two yet. Most people sprinkle altogether too much for the good of their lawns.

This problem of water shortage is one that recurs almost every year, and it will continue to do so. The city is growing, and while it has a great water system, sufficient under ordinary conditions and limitations for a city four times its size, still it is time that some general and comprehensive plan should be adopted to prevent the wanton waste which is the sole cause of the past and present shortages. In saying the sole cause, we mean that if it were not for the waste the shortage would not exist. If the rainfall this year had been normal, there might have been enough water to use and waste too; but there has never been a shortage here which could not have been prevented if there had been no waste.

We believe the time has come for those in authority to consider seriously the adoption of a meter system for city water. It is the only way to keep tab on the amount of water used. It is the easiest and most certain way, if not the only way, to make many people observe the city regulations. There need be no alarm lest the meter system should raise rates—it would tend to cut them down, for honest users. Of course, the man who takes off the nozzle of his hose and lets it run all night would suffer, and so would the woman who does not take ice, and sets her butter in the bath tub and lets the water run all day to keep it cool; but the decent citizen who has some regard for the public welfare and does not want to take more than his fair share, would not have to pay any more than at present; and after the system had become adjusted, would probably have less to pay.

The amount of water used in this town is almost outrageous. It averages 266 gallons every day for each inhabitant—more than four times as much as the usual average in cities. Of course, we need more water than people in the east, on account of the need for sprinkling; but it is not only or mainly the sprinkling that makes the average so high; it is the waste. We believe a fair estimate of the amount of water used with no beneficial result, but simply run to waste, is nearly 50 per cent of the whole amount used for all purposes. Some way of stopping this must be found. No city can stand such a drain. It is unfair to the people who use water decently to allow these practices to go on. Is there any other way to put a stop to them?

MODERN SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

THE meeting of the El Paso County Sunday School association which was held here during the week was remarkable in more than one respect. In the first place, there was a notable attendance—two hundred delegates from a single county indicates a great and growing interest in this branch of the work of the churches. In the second place, the inter-denominational character of the work is worthy of attention. Practically all Sunday schools are now working on very similar if not identical lines. The adoption many years ago of the system of uniform lessons has no doubt had a great effect in unifying the work of the schools, and such conferences as this have helped in it.

The most remarkable thing about the recent conference, however, was the character of its program. The topics were definite and specific. They were discussed by men and women who have had experience, and knew what they were talking about. Take Friday's program, for instance. Sunday school grading was one of the first topics. As a matter of practical administration, there is none more important. It is only within comparatively recent days that any real effort has been made at grading, except in the most general way. There was an infant department, sometimes an adult class; and the rest of the school was too often classified at haphazard. Many times young people who were grades apart in general intelligence and in knowledge of the Bible were put together in the same class. Each teacher taught to suit herself, without any general plan, and often without any teachers' meeting or other conference to secure harmony of effort. Anybody was put in as teacher who could be persuaded to take a class, without regard to qualifications. All kinds of inattention and misbehavior on the part of the pupils were condoned in the effort to keep up the attendance. We do not say that all these evils existed universally, nor that they have now been universally abolished, but there is no modern Sunday school which has not some approach at least to a better system of grading.

Other topics were the improvement of the primary department; the Normal class and its work; the adult Bible class, considered very practically; ... all indicate that the conference had definite ... and kept them in view.

[illegible]

...up people than before in many years. Since religious people have ceased to regard the Bible as a book of separate and individual texts, and have begun to study it in a rational way, it is found that the book is really interesting—that this body of literature is as worthy of attention as the Greek or the Latin, even from a purely literary point of view. Records show that more Bibles are sold than ever before, and we believe that there is a growing interest in Bible reading. Undoubtedly the evolution of the Sunday school into a Bible school has had its effect; and this should become more and more perceptible as the years go by.

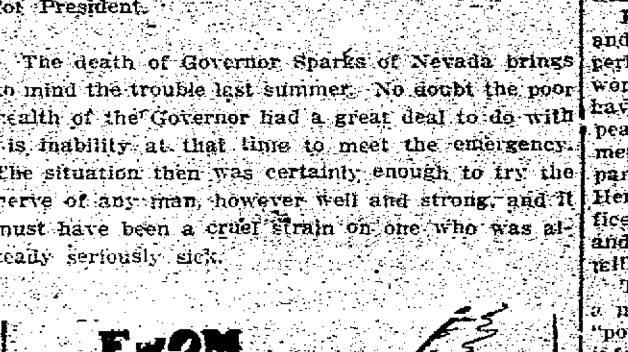

Talking of the New York State Senate, the esteemed Tribune laments thus: "If the voters really had their way in Republican nominations the weakest men would not be put up for office." By "weakest men" the Tribune means to indicate those abandoned persons in the Senate who have thus far refused to vote for the Governor's anti-race-track-gambling bill. There are two reflections that occur; these men may be weak, but if so they must be pretty tough, to stand all the bombarding they have had from the good people among their constituents; and if the voters don't have their way in making nominations, whose fault is it? They do have their way; or, if not, it is because they have no "way" at all, and let their duties of citizenship go by default; in which case they don't deserve anything better than they get.

We are in receipt of a little folder issued by the "Second Term Roosevelt League," which vehemently advocates the re-election of the President "by the votes of the people." It says the President himself may be bound by his promises not to run again, but that does not bind The People, and they should compel him to stay in for what it calls a second term. One Bilger is the spokesman for The People in this leaflet. He does not explain how there is to be a direct vote of The People for the President—whether or not he would have an informal referendum take the place of the regular election, or how—but apparently that makes no difference. To a man who feels as Bilger does, what is a little thing like the Constitution?

Some of the newsmongers at Washington showed their ingenuity last week by starting a "rumor" that there is a strong movement on foot to have Secretary Cortelyou nominated for Vice President on the ticket with Taft. It does not appear whether this rumor was started in order to make the conservative Republicans unhappy or not, but it might easily have that effect. They feel bad enough to have the nomination for the presidency dictated by the present occupant; to have the next Vice President also designated by him would be, as Josh Billings used to say, "2 mutch."

Among the other candidates for the vice presidency will be Governor Guild of Massachusetts, and it is said that the solid delegation of thirty-two from his own state will be behind him and stay with him. Unless some agreement is made with the Taft managers beforehand, the nomination for Vice President may be a much more spirited contest than that for President.

The death of Governor Sparks of Nevada brings to mind the trouble last summer. No doubt the poor health of the Governor had a great deal to do with his inability at that time to meet the emergency. The situation then was certainly enough to try the nerve of any man, however well and strong, and it must have been a cruel strain on one who was already seriously sick.

IS THIS THE EFFECT OF PROHIBITION?

From the Kentucky Mountain Eagle.

But for high heaven's sake let the picture change, let the scene pass! Behold another one! What is it? A mighty army, its host so vast no eye can measure it. Its glistening arms reflect the morning sun, its dancing banners flaunt the morning breeze, its serried ranks, with faces set and step advanced to martial music, stir me to the last fiber of my soul. On toward the foe crowned embattled hills it moves! Anon the war clouds gather and the thunder of the fight rolls and reverberates along the riven heights. Up toward midheaven sleeps the sun, and ever toward those flame cursed crests the squadrons sweep. On stolid faces, victory bent, I see men of the mountains, of the Bluegrass, the Purchase, the Pennyrile, while anon commingling with all behold the kuklux and the night rider! All day long the onslaught, all day long the wild repulse; banner and warrior tramped in bloody mire, and firing steeds and ghastly wounds—all day long the short, stern order—"Charge!"

PICNICS AT LA PORTE.

From the Chicago Daily Tribune.

There is something distinctly discouraging in the attitude of people toward such a tragedy as that enacted at La Porte. Awful crimes have been committed. The story of murder may never be told fully. Men, women and children were killed or burned to death in a house of horrors. The nature of the disclosures thus far made and the whole atmosphere of the place ought to make all shun it except the few representatives of the law called there by official duty.

Instead the blood stained farm has become a favorite excursion point for the time being. Men and women, boys and girls, have made up picnic parties to visit the ruins of the charnel house. Livery stables have done a land office business. Sandwiches and redhots have vanished quickly in the presence of the horde of hungry excursionists. The unfortunate Indiana town has become the scene of jesting crowds of gaping sensation hunters.

When the thought is considered that idle curiosity has played such a part in the whole matter there is reason for discouragement for so-called civilization. Few have reflected upon the probable awful fate of the supposed murderess. The death of possible victims of her fiendish activity has not saddened many. The only voice heard with any distinctness coming out of the shadow of crime is that of the picnicking excursionist finding occasion for laughter and jest, even by the graves of the de... HOW AMERICA WORKED FOR SPAIN.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Americans have a right to take a good deal of interest in the festivities at Madrid and Lisbon these days. The United States had a much closer connection with those events of long ago in those two countries than most of us are aware of. The war of 1808 in Spain resulted in the eventual expulsion of Bonaparte's brother Joseph and the restoration of Ferdinand VII. Ferdinand was weak, corrupt and reactionary. Bonaparte would have given Spain a far better government, had he been allowed to remain, than Ferdinand gave her. But Spaniards, like other people, prefer to endure their own ills rather than to accept benefits which are forced upon them from without. Ferdinand's rule oscillated between democracy and despotism, registering the ebb and the flow of the liberal wave, and at last, when the holy alliance sent in its armies to his rescue in 1823, despotism established itself formally, and, as he hoped, permanently. It was then that American influence stepped in anew and checked the wave of reaction. Monroe's hands-off-the-American-continent warning, issued in his annual message in December of that year, halted the holy allies in their plot to re-establish absolutism in Mexico, Peru, Chile and the other colonies on this side of the Atlantic which had broken away from Spain during the days of Bonaparte's sway in that country. The check in the march of absolutism to the American continent encouraged the liberals in Spain, Portugal and all the rest of Europe, and incited the granting of a constitution to Portugal in 1826 by Dom Pedro, which the Portuguese are celebrating today. Outside as well as inside their own country, the Americans have made some history which has registered itself in freedom's world march.

BLUFF VS. BRAIN.

By Herbert J. Hapgood.

Said the man with the Bluff
To the man with the Brain:
"Now, I don't need your knowledge and learning,
For I'm right up to snuff
And I'm sure to obtain Any job worth as much as you're earning."

But the man with the Brain,
Told the man with the Bluff
That the surest and wisest proceeding
Is "to work might and main;
Just deliver the stuff
And you're pretty d——d sure of succeeding."

THE MAN AND HIS JOB

By Herbert J. Hapgood

"Hood an ass with reverend purple, so you can hide his two ambitious ears, and he shall pass for a cathedral doctor." So says Ben Johnson.

Strange is the relation which exists between a man's actual worth and his outward appearance!

I have often noticed that appearances as a rule tell a story just opposite to the true state of affairs. You go into a business office and look around. The fifteen dollar a week clerk, perched on a high stool behind the assistant bookkeeper's desk, in all probability is wearing a white vest and his tie is decorated by an attractive piece of jewelry. The cub salesman is lounging about the front office with a big cigar stuck in his face and looking for all the world like the financial backer of the whole organization. A multifariously colored spring hat, some twenty-four inches in diameter hangs on the rack over the stenographer's desk and an expensive looking chatelaine, a pair of long gloves and a bunch of violets are thrown in careless profusion next to her typewriter.

But who is that plainly dressed woman in a neat and simple tailor made suit? Oh, you say, she is perhaps some unfortunate individual looking for work. That's just when you are mistaken. You have been fooled like so many others by mere appearance. The woman is not looking for employment; she is the wife of the president of the company and has just stepped out of her automobile. Her husband is signing his mail in his private office. He wears a faded black tie and white socks and nobody would ever think he is worth a half million.

The vernacular of the subordinate who would be a millionaire on ten a week refers to his job as a "position," speaks not of pay, but of "salary," and informs his friends that he is on his way to "business."

But the really high grade man speaks about his "job," and asks the cashier for his "pay," and says he is going to "work."

How Alexander Untied the Knot

By Herbert Kaufman.

¶ Alexander the Great was being shown the Gordian Knot. "It can't be untied," they told him; "every man who tried to do it fell down."

¶ But Alexander was not discouraged because the rest had flunked. He simply realized that he would have to go at it in a different way. And instead of wasting time with his fingers he drew his sword and slashed it apart.

¶ Every day a great business general is shown some knot which has proven too much for his competitors, and he succeeds because he finds a way to cut it. The fumbler has no show so long as there is a brother merchant who doesn't waste time trying to accomplish the impossible who takes lessons from the failures about him and avoids the methods which were their downfall.

¶ The knottiest problems in trade are:
1 The problem of location.
2 The problem of getting the crowds.
3 The problem of keeping the crowds.
4 The problem of minimizing fixed expenses.
5 The problem of creating a valuable good will.

¶ None of these knots is going to be untied by fumbling fingers. They are too complicated. They're all involved together—twisted and entangled over and about each other so intertwined that they can't be solved singly like the Gordian knot they must be cut through at one stroke. And you can't cut the knot with any sword except the newspaper because:
1—A store that is constantly before the people makes its own neighborhood.
2 Crowds can be brought from anywhere by daily advertising.
3 Customers can always be held by inducements.
4 Fixed expenses can only be reduced by increasing the volume of sales.
5 Good will can only be created through publicity.

¶ Advertising is breeding new giants every year and making them more powerful every hour. Publicity is the sustaining food of a powerful store and the only strengthening nourishment for a weak one. The retailer who delays his entry into advertising must pay the penalty for his procrastination by facing more giant competitors as every month of opportunity slips by.

¶ Personal ability as a close purchaser and as a clever seller doesn't count for a hang so long as other men are equally well posted and wear the sword of publicity to boot. They are able to tie your business into constantly closer knots, while you cannot retaliate because there is no knot which their advertising cannot cut for them.

¶ Yesterday you lost a customer—today they took one tomorrow they'll get another. You cannot cope with their competition because you haven't the weapon with which to oppose it. You can't untie your Gordian knot because it can't be untied you've got to cut it.

¶ You must become an advertiser or you must pay the penalty of incompetence.

¶ You not only require the newspaper to fight for a more hopeful tomorrow, but to keep today's situation from becoming hopeless.

THE BLACK-HANDERS IN GRIEF

They Started at Early Age of 15 and Threatened to Hold Up Six-Footer.

From the New York Globe.

Two white-faced frightened boys, 15 years of age, their knees a trifle unsteady, stumbled up to Justice Deuel's bench at the children's court today as prisoners. The complainant, a big, broad-shouldered man, six feet tall, and several officers stood back of them, their faces beaming with pride at having at last captured a dangerous "Black Hand camorra after the fashion of 'Steve the Stealthy Sleuth.'" Here were the desperadoes.

On February 3 the complainant, Albert Miller, who owns the apartment house at 314 West One Hundred and Twelfth street, where the mother of one of the boys, Adolph Schopen, is janitress, found an unstamped letter in his mail box. Tearing it open he found a horrifying picture of a black hand gripping a dagger, from which dropped blood.

"Heavens! The Black Hand!" he exclaimed. Then, with heart fluttering, the six-footer read:

"Bewar the Blackhand! We must have $500 at once on 110 St and 5th for night at 3 A. M. Bring no one with you. Place in a sigar or tin box and place near steps in park. If not we will blow your house up on the same morning.

"If this is know to the Poleece,—hist! May get yoo in the meantime. We will watch yoo and your wife and will kill yoo and her. Warning. This aint a Joke.

"Remember 3 A. M. Tonight."

Miller bravely decided not to give up the money and merely bolted the door at night, waiting for the crash that was due after 3 A. M. As it didn't come that day or the next, he regained his composure and felt free to go about his business. Then suddenly on Saturday night, just as he was ready to go out and select a special Sunday dinner in celebration of his marvelous escape from death, he found another letter in his box. This one had a picture of a man shooting another. From the mouth of the injured man was balloon[?] the words: "Spare the bullets; here's the coin."

From cheef, the letter ran, we have got notic that yoo ain't paid. Attenchon to Our last letter!!! From now one we will watch clos. We ar desprate men and must have money, $500, or there is trouble.

"Now we will give you until 9th, that is tonight!!! Not later than 2:30 A. M. 8 men!!! will watch you do it. Place it in a can. Bring no one with you or LEAD will be used. If this is known to the poleece, we will kill yoo or yoor wife. Yoo ar in danger.

"per Black Hand.
"(Danger.)

This was too much for Mr. Miller. It was impossible to comb his hair in the morning, so greatly did it bristle, even 24 hours after he had read the missive. So he got Officers Haggerty and Donahue on the track of the desperadoes.

Overhearing a conversation through the janitor's tube, Miller concluded that Adolph Schopen was the representative of the gang. The two officers immediately got hold of another dime-novel-reading boy frequently seen in Schopen's company and persuaded him to confess.

With great bravado he did it, painting a wild program of terror. On this weighty evidence little George Breckenridge was arrested with Schopen and given over to the custody of the Gerry society.

"Were you really afraid," someone asked Mr. Miller in court. A snicker ran through the crowd, and Miller shifted his feet uneasily.

"Order!" snapped the justice. "Case continued until Friday."

TAILOR SHOPS ABOARD SHIPS.

From the New York Sun.

London's latest cut of trousers and frock coat may be made to your order, sir, a few staterooms away while you are enjoying your annual trans-Atlantic trip.

And for you, madame or mademoiselle, it will be possible to have a Parisian or New York modiste located a few dozen yards or so from your suite of rooms to fit to your ... [illegible] the most exquisite costumes a la Parisienne.

The tailoring and high class frock-making establishments, distinct as to their operations, are to be among many other innovations aboard the Europa, the "biggest ever" steamer which the Hamburg-American line is having built at an Irish shipyard for her maiden trip this summer.

When the swells about the St. Regis and the Gotham were told this afternoon that the cream of the "men milliners'" emporiums of London, and designers for kings and emperors by special appointment, were to maintain a tailoring establishment aboard the Europa, they literally hugged themselves in joy.

There were quite a number of English "toffs" about the Waldorf-Astoria when the glad tidings of the Hamburg line up-to-dateness was carried there, and one of them said:

"B' jove, 'tis splendid! No more beastly Yankee clothes."

The idea of introducing a tailoring establishment aboard the Europa was suggested by the numerous complaints as to ill-fitting garments on the part of American tourists who bought clothes in England.

In addition to a high-caste London tailor, there also will be aboard the ship one, and possibly two, American clothes builders to satisfy those who do not believe in having "Prince Alberts" cut out with an ax, as is sometimes done after the fashion of Piccadilly.

A French dressmaker is to be selected from one of the leading shops of Paris to preside over the destinies of the modiste's parlor on the Europa.

Another possible innovation is an exhibition and salesroom of one of the best known jewelers and gem handlers of this city. The idea is to have passengers select or purchase diamond tiaras or pearl necklaces or other expensive articles of personal adornment en route, thus doing away with the necessity of delay and automobile hire in Paris, London, Berlin and other diamond marts of Europe.

THE FAMOUS BASILISK.

According to the ancient writers the basilisk—sometimes called cockatrice—was a monster to be greatly dreaded. Its breath filled the air with a deadly poison and burned up vegetation, and the glance of its eye, they say, was fatal to both man and beast. The only creature that could face it and live, they said, was the cock, and travelers were advised to take loud-crowing cocks with them as a protection against the monster. So much for superstition. As a matter of fact the basilisk is a harmless lizard, living a quiet life in the woods and feeding on insects. Its appearance, however, is formidable, and it is this, perhaps, that gave it a bad name. It grows to a length of from twenty-five to thirty inches, including its tail, which is much longer than its body. Rising from its head and inclining backward is a broad, winglike expansion, which gives it some resemblance to the flying lizard. The crest of this expansion is formed somewhat like a crown, and that gave the basilisk its name, which is from the Greek word meaning "king."

What the Press Agents Say

HENRY MILLER IN "THE GREAT DIVIDE"

The most striking success of the past quarter century, "The Great Divide," which ranks as the best play on a national theme by a recent American playwright, is at last to be seen by the play-goers of this city at the Opera House, soon, when it will be presented by that notable actor-manager, Henry Miller, at the head of the original metropolitan production, which gave this drama such a record run of almost two entire seasons, 500 nights, in New York city, at the Princess and Daily's theaters. This piece has been declared to be "the long awaited 'great American play,'" and gave its author, William Vaugn Moody, a professor of literature in the University of Chicago, hitherto unknown to the stage, an immediate rank as a new dramatist to be reckoned with. It brought him fame and fortune at once, and three companies have this season been playing "The Great Divide" on the road. Local play-goers are fortunate in securing Mr. Miller himself at the head of his brilliant company, on their way to the coast. In the supporting company are such well-known favorites as Laura Hope Crews, once leading lady with Otis Skinner; Edyth Olive, the noted English emotional actress, who electrified all London with her portrayal of "Medea;" Charles Wingate, and others of favorite footlight repute. The scenes represent a cabin on a cactus ranch in southern Arizona, "the roof of the Rockies," in the heart of the continental divide, and a New England home in sharp Puritan contrast, where the struggle between the spirit of the west and the spirit of the east, dealt with in the play, is brought to a happy climax by the victory of love.

WILLIAM COLLIER IN "CAUGHT IN THE RAIN"

Charles Frohman will present William Collier at the Opera House on Tuesday evening in "Caught in the Rain," a three-act farce-comedy by Mr. Collier and Grant Stewart. The clean, wholesome fun of "Caught in the Rain" has been especially commended. It has an engaging story, well told and not lacking in interest. Mr. Collier has never had a better role than the central character of the play, Dick Crawford, a mining expert. All the scenes of "Caught in the Rain" are laid in or near Helena, Montana, with complications about mining properties providing the serious interest of the plot. The comedy interest centers in the bashfulness of Dick Crawford in the presence of women. He thinks little of rescuing a miner at the risk of his life, but when he meets a woman he is scared half to death. Of course, "the" woman comes along one day—and most unexpectedly. During a terrific thunder storm Crawford seeks shelter under a friendly awning. So does a pretty Helena girl, Muriel Mason. That settles it. It is plainly a case of love at first sight. Crawford does not learn her name until late in the play, and in the meantime the complications involve her father's financial standing and a wealthy mine-owning suitor for her hand. In the end Crawford is made aware of the true state of affairs, all difficulties are happily adjusted and Muriel Mason becomes Mrs. Dick Crawford.

The three acts of "Caught in the Rain" show a street scene in Helena, ending with a most realistic rain storm; a country house near the city and a hunting lodge in the Rockies. Charles Frohman has supplied an exceptionally capable company for Mr. Collier's support. It includes Albert Perry, John Saville, Reginald Mason, W. H. Post, Charles Poore, Thomas Beauregard, Thomas Martin, John Adam, E. N. Whitney, Ellen Mortimer, Helena Collier-Garrick, Jane Laurel and Anne Bradley.

THE DAWKINS VIOLIN QUARTET

From the Rocky Mountain Chautauqua Journal.

The Dawkins Violin quartet, Edith Sindlinger, Laura Peck, Regina Hanson and Ellida Anderson, is at once one of the most artistic and unique of organizations. These young ladies, who had already won laurels as soloists, have added to their popularity by their splendid quartet playing. The works of the masters, Wagner, Haydn, Mozart, Grieg and our modern classical writers, are played with a finish and expression that have assured them instant success. It is believed that this is the first organization of its kind and that four violins have never before attempted to interpret scores, originally written for two violins, viola and cello; yet, without aid from either of the deeper-toned instruments, the tonal balance and ensemble of the quartet are perfect.

AT THE EMPIRE.

A glance at the program for the coming week at the Empire reveals an array of talent seldom seen on the vaudeville stage. The entire bill has been carefully selected and contains some of the best acts that have ever been presented to local theater goers.

As a headliner Manager Robert Ellis presents the only original Cal Stewart and company in his great eastern success, "Uncle Josh On the Bowery." Cal Stewart is known in millions of homes by his inimitable farmer selections on the talking machines. This act [illegible] footlights and is alone worth the price of admission.

Southerland and Curtis are sure favorites in a singing, dancing and clever dialogue stunt. Their act is thoroughly entertaining and places them among the front rank of entertainers.

The college boys, McGlyone and Shelley, are, without exception, the best dancers on the circuit. They have both won medals for proficiency in the terpichorean art and issue a standing challenge to meet all comers while in the city.

The motion picture films to be shown this week are the longest and best yet shown. As usual an illustrated song will be rendered. The program for the week is unusually good and will make a hit with local patrons.

FAIRYLAND A GRAND SUCCESS.

Manager Braden of Fairyland is conceded to much credit for the excellent class of film pictures he has been showing at the popular little amusement parlor. Everything is new and as fast as new films are put on the market they are secured for Fairyland. The colored film shown Friday and Saturday, "The Legend of a Ghost," over 1,000 feet long, is by far the best picture ever shown in the west and was received with great favor by those who saw it. Ordinarily moving picture shows only use one piece of music, but Mr. Braden has three at Fairyland. Harry B. Frink, a baritone vocalist of New York, is very popular, and Mr. Charles Templeton, violin soloist, and Mr. Harry Van, pianist, furnish the instrumental part of the program. Fairyland is modern and well ventilated, equipped with electric fans and comfortable in every way. It provides an ideal place to spend an hour, and is open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. Courteous attendants and ushers to see that you are comfortably seated and entertained. Drop in the first time you pass Fairyland, and if you are pleased tell your friends about it.

ACTRESSES' DEVOTION TO DOGS

From the New York Morning Telegraph.

Maxine Elliott's present tour has been rather eventful by reason of the fact that in several cities Miss Elliott has been obliged to make her home in other hotels than the most exclusive.

This by reason of her devotion to Sport, the wonderful bulldog given to her by Nat Goodwin some years ago. Nothing would induce Miss Elliott to consign Sport to the care of a servant, and therefore he accompanies her to whatever caravansary may be her temporary home.

Several of the fashionable hotels "on the road," which formerly provided kennels for dogs on the roof or in the baggage rooms, have now abandoned that plan and cater to human guests only. Therefore Miss Elliott has been unable to patronize several houses where Sport was discriminated against.

And the same state of affairs has afflicted Fritzi Scheff and Anna Held, both of whom would perish of friendless loneliness were they separated from the French poodles that divide honors as being the most beautifully shaven dogs on earth.

CARNATIONS RECALL HOME TO MRS. ASTOR

From the New York American.

Mrs. Waldorf Astor may have forsaken her native land and joined the colony of Americans who make their homes in England, but that the little Virginian still has at least a sentimental love for the "States" is shown by an incident that occurred not long before she returned to the other side recently.

Passing a fashionable florist's establishment one day she saw quantities of gorgeous carnations in the window. Whether or not they suggested the little garden pinks of her Southern home, glorified, nobody, but the fair Nannie probably will ever know, but, acting on the impulse, she went in and inquired whether she could procure some growing plants.

Informed that she could, Mrs. Astor ordered specimens of all the famous varieties shipped to Cliveden, the Astor estate in England, and enough of each kind to insure against loss or injury in transit.

Now the head gardener there is devoting his time and skill to caring for the transplanted beauties and endeavoring by every means known to his art to make them bloom for the great estate's fair mistress, who looks upon them as "reminders of home." At last accounts the plants were all doing well.

Green in many tones is also considered smart. What is known as jockey and jade green are in high favor. The trail of the latter is noticeable in almost every costume. It sweeps from hats in attractive aigrettes, it trails the floor in clinging cloth and soft satin, it is introduced into filet lace for yoke and sleeves, it is in striped Roman sashes, and it has arrived in silk and leather for shoes and stockings.

GAMES TODAY.

Trinidad vs. Zebs at Roswell park, 3:30 p. m.
Pueblo at Cripple Creek.

Frank Cramer, aided by the rest of the Zebs, defeated the mighty Trinidad Coal Diggers yesterday afternoon. It would take a good-sized book to tell in detail all that Mr. Cramer did yesterday afternoon, but he was the principal factor in the 5 to 4 score by which the proud leaders in the Colorado State Baseball association were humbled for the first time this season.

Three times Cramer, in right field, pulled down long flies that would have been good for two, three or four bases if he had not nailed them. One one of these he completed a double which ended a shaky inning. His own two-bagger, the longest hit of the day, scored two of the Zebs' runs. He started a batting rally in the seventh that would have won the game had not he been nabbed at home, taking a good chance. And he was the man that scored the winning run in the ninth inning. This in brief is what Cramer did. There were others who did things but not in such quantity and variety as did Cramer.

Soggy Field Mars Game.

The field was soggy and slippery because of the heavy rain of the night before and the poor playing that marked the opening innings of the game was partly due to this. A drizzling rain also fell through a greater portion of the game, but in spite of the cold weather, some 600 loyal fans saw the Zebs take the invaders into camp.

Outside of the first two innings, in which both teams apparently got off on the wrong foot, it was a good game. Honors were about evenly divided between Ackley and Nash, but the local twirler improved as the game progressed while his rival was not as strong in the closing innings. Ackley had 10 strikeouts to his credit, retiring men in this fashion in seven of the nine innings. After the second inning, he kept the game under better control than his opponent.

The Zeb twirler began the game by striking out Green, who leads the Trinidad batting list. Manager Webster singled over Clifford's head, and Johnson fanned. Then Kerner drove one past short which Good missed and later fumbled on Moorehead's throw, allowing the Coal Miner to circle the bases and score two runs. Ackley threw one over Wahl's head and after a discussion over the ground rules, Owens was landed on second base. He was caught at home on Moorehead's throw on Ambrose's hit.

Walsh Scores for Zebs.

"Bulger" Walsh started the Springs base-running when he got to second on Ambrose's overthrow, advancing to third on Cramer's out. Ambrose to Kerner. The fast little second baseman stole home while Moorehead was purloining second after he had a base on balls. Dow sacrificed Moorehead to third, and was himself safe at first when Kerner failed to hold the ball, Moorehead scoring on the play. The next two were easy outs.

Infield hits placed Craig and Brierly on bases in the second, Nash advancing both a base on a sacrifice. Wahl to Walsh, who covered first. Green's hit to left field scored both Craig and Brierly when Good fell in running after the ball. Cramer made his first sensational catch when Webster came to bat, and he completed the double by throwing Green out at first.

Cramer's Two-Bagger.

Two more runs were gathered in by Colorado Springs in the half of the second. With two men out Ambrose made another error and Ackley was given life at first. Walsh would have been an easy out at first had Kerner tossed the ball to Nash who was on the bag, but as it was, he landed safely, with Ackley on second. Then came the mighty Cramer to bat, and it was his two-bagger that tied the score.

For the next six innings [illegible] kept tamed, sensational catches by [illegible] and Clifford in the fourth assisting in this process. The Zebs [illegible] were unable to do any real threatening until the seventh. Then, with [illegible] down, Cramer, Moorehead and Dow [illegible] in succession, but Cramer was [illegible] at the home plate when he tried [illegible] on Dow's grounder which went [illegible]. Luxus Team Scores 8 to 3 Victory in Heavy Rain in Denver.

Special to The Gazette.

DENVER, May 23.—Playing in a heavy rain, the Luxus team today defeated Selee's Giants by a score of 8 to 3. Newmeyer and Birkendahl were in the box for the victors, and for eight innings the losing team could not score. But in the ninth it got three runs across the plate. DOUGLAS WINS AT GOLF

W. F. Douglas yesterday afternoon won the nine-hole choice score handicap golf tournament at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club. Next Saturday, the Town and Gown and Country club golf teams, of 18 men each, will meet for a Memorial day match. H. B. Davis and W. F. Douglas will act as captains.

by the time Cramer nabbed the fly out of the skies.

The game was won in the last half of the ninth. Walsh was out, Webster to Kerner, but Cramer was given a base on balls. Moorehead singled to right and Cramer landed on third. Dow struck out on what he claimed to be only two strikes. Wahl swung on the first ball that was pitched him and sent it to left field. It was safe hit and Cramer scored.

These two teams will play again at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

COAL DIGGERS AGAIN TODAY

President Runyon was there.

Today's game begins at 3:30 o'clock.

Frank Selee sat on the bench with the Zebs yesterday.

Zebbites will be on hand in large numbers this afternoon.

"Bulger" Walsh is fast on bases; also in covering second base.

It didn't seem to be as slippery in right field as in some other parts of the field.

"Somewhere in this world there is joy tonight." But that somewhere is not Trinidad.

President John English of the Trinidad club says the team will be out for revenge today.

A big delegation from the southern town will be here today to see that it does not happen again.

The same teams play at Roswell this afternoon, providing the weather man is not too grouchy.

Have you noticed that Cramer is also something of a success on the coaching lines? Watch him.

Nash is a little downhearted, but says that he has no kick coming, and that Honska will take the Zebs down the line today.

Wasson, who will twirl for the Zebs today, won a 12-inning battle for the University of Colorado against the Tigers yesterday.

F. L. Dickinson, coach of the University of California team, champions of the Pacific coast, was an interested spectator at yesterday's game.

Manager Good was suffering from a broken finger received two weeks ago, but insisted upon going into the game. A line drive to left caught the injured digit, and at the end of the second inning he went to the bench and sent McHugh out in his place.

CRIPPLE CREEK WINS

GOLD MINERS VICTORIOUS OVER PUEBLO, 2 TO 0

Both Teams Play Fast Ball in Spite of Bad Weather—McCullock Stars.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, May 23.—In the opening game of the Colorado State Baseball association played here today, the Gold Diggers were victorious by a score of 2 to 0 over the Pueblo All-Stars. The game was played in a drizzling rain which began about 1 o'clock and lasted throughout the afternoon. But in spite of this and the cold weather, 250 fans shivered through a game that was one of the fastest and best ever seen in Cripple Creek.

McCullock, who twirled for Pueblo, had all the batters of the Cripple Creek team at his mercy with the single exception of the sixth inning when the only two hits he gave during the game netted the runs that lost for his team. In this inning, he gave a base on balls to Sweet, which was followed by Chevalier's single to right field. Buckles sacrificed both, and Kroell hit a stinging single to deep center which scored the two men.

Chevalier pitched for the locals, and although he allowed seven hits, kept them from coming too close together. The only time he was in danger a fast double from Kroell to Buckles ended the suspense.

The fielding of both teams was exceptionally fast, the honors being carried off by Greenwood, Kroell and Starkey.

The same teams meet here again tomorrow. The score:

A COLD, WET DAY

Somewhere in this world today the sun is shining bright
Spreading o'er the bosom of the earth its mellow light;
Somewhere in this world the breeze is sighing through the trees,
Filling many joyous hearts with baseball melodies;
Somewhere fans are cheering for the idols they adore,
And upon them gleeful yelps and soulful paeans pour;
Somewhere it is summer now and clear blue skies hold away;
Somewhere in this world today it's warm enough to play.

Somewhere in this world the sun in shining fierce and hot,
Smiling on the boys that play upon some baseball lot;
Somewhere in this world the ump is yelling loud and strong,
Bringing to each soul content and to each heart a song.
Somewhere birds are chirping and the daisies nod and swing
In the lap of summer or upon the breast of spring;
Somewhere kids run faster or beneath the shade trees sprawl;
Somewhere it is warm enough to play a game of ball.

REGATTA BIG SUCCESS

BEST EVER HELD BY AMERICAN ROWING ASSOCIATION.

Several Records Are Broken—New York Crews Carry Off Lion's Share of Honors.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—In the best regatta ever held by the American Rowing association, five different eights this afternoon beat the record for the course of a mile and a sixteenth on the Schuylkill river in this city.

The best mark of the day was that of 6 minutes 26 seconds which was made by the University of Pennsylvania 'varsity eight and the New York Athletic club, when they rowed a dead heat for first place in the race for the first eights. Again in the race for junior college crews, all three contestants—Yale, Pennsylvania and Harvard—beat the former record of 6 minutes 34 seconds, the time of the victorious Yale eight being 6 minutes 27 seconds and of the Harvard and Pennsylvania crews, which rowed a dead heat for second place, 6:28 3-5.

New York crews carried off the lion's share of the honors, winning four contests and tying one. Philadelphia was second with three firsts and a tie for first. Georgetown Preparatory school, Harvard, Yale and Baltimore, each got one first.

One of the biggest crowds that ever saw a local regatta lined the banks of the river to witness the finishes.

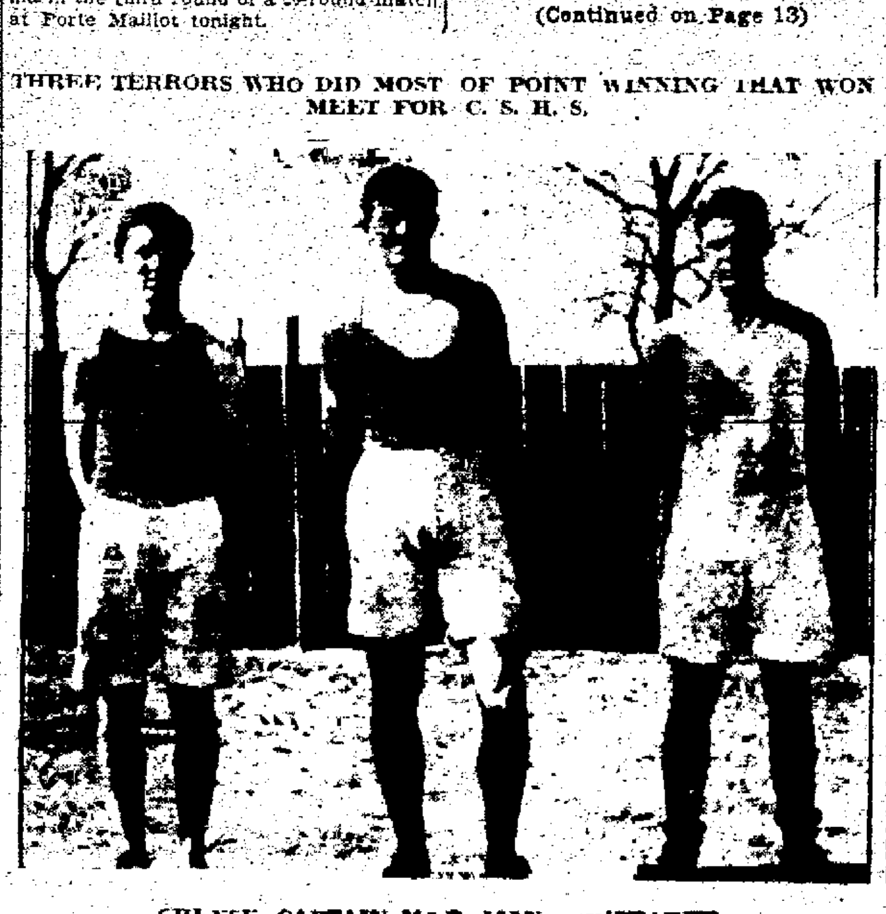

The interscholastic eight-oared event was won by Georgetown Preparatory school, Washington; second, Central High school, Philadelphia; third, Cascadilla school, Ithaca; fourth, McKinley school, Washington. Time, 6:45 1-5.

First four-oared sculls, won by Nonpareil R. C., New York; second, Philadelphia Barge club; third, Undine Barge club, Philadelphia. Time, 6:59 1-5.

Second eight-oared shells, won by Harvard freshmen; second, University of Pennsylvania freshmen; third, West Philadelphia Boat club. Time, 6:35.

U. C. DEFEATS TIGERS

COLORADO COLLEGE LOSES BY SCORE OF 4 TO 3.

Fast Twelve-Inning Game Full of Excitement From Start to Finish.

Special to The Gazette.

BOULDER, May 23.—The University of Colorado today secured revenge on the Colorado College Tigers, winning a hard-fought 12-inning battle, 4 to 3. It was a pitchers' battle in which Wasson and Hyder were evenly matched. Both teams got seven hits, while Colorado College made four and the University three errors. It was an exciting game, full of ginger, the two teams fought through a hard struggle.

The Boulderites scored first in the opening inning, when with two out, Garst knocked a two-bagger which was converted into a run when Van Stone dropped Snyder's fly in center field. In the third inning two more Boulderites crossed the pan. Mathews was out, Schmid to Devine, but Bernard drew a base on balls, stole second, and scored on a wild throw. Wasson fanned, and Garst followed with a single to left field on which he scored on Deesz' overthrow.

The Tigers got their first score in the third inning. Jones drew a walk, but was out at second, Van Stone taking his base on the fielder's choice. Schmid got first on a similar play, and scored on a series of bad throws. In the sixth the Tigers tied up the score. Morris got his base on an infield error, stealing second. Siddons flew out to center, but Sherry knocked a pretty two-bagger in the same direction, which scored "Tub" and on which he himself scored on an overthrow.

Van Stone took Hyder's place in the box in the eleventh. The winning score came in the twelfth when Snyder singled, stole second, went to third on Stirrett's out, and scored on Fawcett's out, Sherry to Devine.

MANUAL WINS HONORS

Defeats East Denver in Decisive Interscholastic Contest.

DENVER, May 23.—Manual Training High school today defeated East Denver High school by a score of 4 to 3, thus winning the championship in division A of the state league. Manual will play the victor in class B and the winner of this contest will meet the championship team in the southern division, composed of Colorado Springs High School and Cutler Academy.

MINES-AGGIES GAME CALLED

Rain Stops Championship Contest at Fort Collins.

Special to The Gazette.

FORT COLLINS, May 23.—After playing for five innings and with the score standing 0 to 0, the School of Mines and the State Agricultural college were forced by rain to postpone their intercollegiate baseball game until Monday. The game will practically decide the intercollegiate championship.

TENNIS FINALS POSTPONED

Owing to the rain yesterday and Friday afternoons it has been impossible to play off the finals in the mixed doubles handicap tennis tourney at the Town and Gown club. They will be played off tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, Mrs. Pastorius and Dr. Webb and Mrs. Joy and Dr. Gillett being the contestants.

INTEREST IN ENDURANCE RACE

Many Springs Autoists to See Big Contest at Brighton Next Saturday.

A large number of auto enthusiasts from Colorado Springs will go to Denver next Saturday to see the first annual Rocky Mountain endurance contest, which will be held over the triangular 32-mile course near Brighton. This race will be the first big event of its kind in this region, and in time will become one of the biggest international endurance contests in the world.

The winner of the contest is to receive a $500 cup and one-half the total entry fees. A second cup, valued at $250, has been offered for the car that makes the fastest lap over the 32 miles of the course.

E. Linn Mathewson, the best known automobile driver in the west, will pilot a Thomas-Detroit Forty car in the race. The car which Mathewson will drive is one of the two Thomas-Detroit Blue Birds which were entered in the Savannah races. More recently it took part in the 450-mile Detroit endurance run, being one of the three Thomas-Detroit cars to finish with perfect score. The Blue Bird has been shipped to Denver and driver Mathewson has been putting it through a few try-outs on the 300-mile course. He went 32 miles in 45 minutes Friday.

Several world's records for motoring are held by Mathewson, including his remarkable performance last summer of driving 50 miles on a circular track in 55 minutes and 43 3-5 seconds in a Thomas-Detroit Forty. He took part in the New York to Paris race, piloting the Thomas entry from Cheyenne to Ogden. Western automobile fans are counting on him to make an unusually good showing in the 300-mile cup race.

TERRORS TO MEET ACADEMY

Second Championship Game Scheduled for Wednesday at Washburn Field.

Colorado Springs High School and Cutler Academy will meet next Wednesday afternoon on Washburn field for their second championship game in the southern interscholastic race for the championship. The two teams alone compose this division, the victor in which is to meet the northern leaders for state honors on June 6. In the first championship game, last Thursday, the Terrors won by a score of 6 to 3. A victory for the academy this week will mean that a third game will have to be played.

TO FINISH SCHEDULE TONIGHT

Representatives of Colorado State Baseball Association Will Hold Meeting Here.

To complete the baseball schedule, which has been under consideration for the last three weeks, representatives of the six clubs in the Colorado State Baseball association will meet here this evening. The meeting has been called by President Alfred Damon Runyon, who is in this city and will preside. The schedule will call for games on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays throughout the summer.

Manager Joe Good will represent Colorado Springs; George Morrison Reid, the Luxus; James Hanley, Cripple Creek; Frank Selee, Denver Little Giants; Ed Webster, Trinidad, and Fred Dickson, Pueblo. Secretary C. A. Letts will also be present.

LOCALS WIN MEET

TERRORS RUN UP A TOTAL OF 45 POINTS.

MORRISON SMASHES RECORD

Throws Hammer 152 Feet, Setting New State Interscholastic Mark. Pueblo Central and Manual Training of Denver Get Second and Third.

Colorado Springs High School yesterday won a clean-cut victory in the fourth annual interscholastic track and field meet held under the auspices of Colorado College on Washburn field. With the Longmont and East Denver stars, who carried off the lion's share of the points in the Boulder meet a week ago, eliminated, the Terrors had little trouble in outdistancing their other rivals. They rolled up a total of 45 points, as against the 31 secured by Pueblo Central, their most dangerous competitors; 15 that went to Manual Training of Denver; 13 to North Canon City; 11 to South Canon City; 10 to North Denver; nine to Loveland and one to Littleton.

By defeating North Denver High school in the relay race, the Terrors also secure possession of the 1907 loving cup. Last year these two teams tied for first place in the meet, and it was agreed that the team that made the best time in this year's relay should be entitled to permanent possession of the cup.

Morrison the Star.

Captain Richard Morrison was the hero of the meet. He won the individual honors, with a total of 17 points, winning the hammer throw and 220-yard dash, taking second in the shot and discus, and placing third in the 100-yard dash, besides running twice in the relay race. To his lot fell the breaking of the only record that was shattered at the meet. This was in the hammer throw, his favorite event, in which he raised the mark he set at Boulder last week from 150 feet 4 inches to 152 feet. Cheese, the Colorado Springs freshman; Carper, the Manual Training hurdler, and Kettle, the weight man from North Canon, got 10 points each, while Atterberry of Pueblo Central got eight points and Whittaker of Colorado Springs High School 7½.

An Exciting Meet.

With further record-breaking prevented by the weather conditions, the meet was closely contested throughout. Every event furnished finishes that were close, and the several hundred high school students who had gathered here saw a thrilling meet. One hundred of the best high school athletes in the state put forth their best efforts to win, and it was a struggle that was intense and exciting from the running of the first preliminary heat in the morning until the last lap of the relay had been finished late in the afternoon.

The finish of the 100-yard dash was so close that it required several minutes' consultation on the part of the judges before the award was finally made to Cheese. Cheese and Morrison of the Terrors, West of South Canon, Rickard and Muncaster of Manual and Teter of North Denver, qualified. The track was slow, and the fastest heat of the day was in :11. Morrison had the 220 sprint by a yard, Teter and Carpenter running a dead heat for second. Close behind were Simpson of North Denver and Muncaster of Manual.

All Events Close.

Cheese took the quarter on the home stretch, running a superb race. Weed, the fast Pueblan, jumped into the lead early in the race, and it was only in the last 100 yards that the Springs freshman sprinted past him. Jamison ran a nice race in the half mile, but could not conquer the Pueblo man, Haver. It was a close finish, in which Haver had only about two yards' lead, while Smith was pushing Jamison hard for second. Short and Sullivan were the contestants in a pretty sprint at the close of the mile race.

Carper of Manual Training was master of the hurdles, running both in good time. Over the high sticks, he beat out Beckfield of Loveland by two yards, Whittaker and Johnson of the Terrors tying for third. West and Beckfield had a close fight for second in the low hurdles.

Atterberry, who holds the state record at 10 feet 10 inches in the vault, was required to do only 10 feet 4 inches to win. In the high jump, Whittaker did half an inch better than that which won the Boulder meet. Morrison far outclassed all the hammer throwers, Prouty's throw for second being 122 feet 2 inches, while Wilson made 121 feet 5 inches. Morrison's shotput was 38 feet 6 inches. The broad jump was close, Warnack winning at 19 feet 11¼ inches; Atterberry taking second at 19 feet 5½ inches, and Whittaker third at 18 feet 3½ inches.

Relay a Hummer.

The relay furnished the greatest excitement of the meet. In the first heat, [illegible] starting with North Denver and Loveland, in 1:40. Colorado Springs High School, Pueblo Central and North Canon City were in the second heat. The time was faster, 1:38 2-5, the Terrors and Pueblo finishing in a dead heat, which necessitated their running it over for a decision. In the first race, Whittaker lost about a yard to Loope, while Jamison finished about the same distance behind Haver. Cheese, however, gained on Weed, and gave Morrison two yards' lead. Atter-

All contributions intended for the social department of the Sunday Gazette should reach the editor, Mrs. Ella Celeste Adams, 226 Cheyenne avenue, telephone Main 1322, or Gazette editorial rooms, telephone Main 215, not later than Friday noon.

MUSICALLY and socially, the most notable event of this week will be the concert to be given by the Colorado Springs Musical club chorus, next Thursday evening at 8:15 o'clock. The concert will certainly prove a brilliant close to the most brilliant musical season ever known in this city.

A program replete with novel interest has been prepared, including several numbers by the popular Dawkins violin quartet of Denver. Miss Regina Hanson of the quartet will be the solo violinist of the evening, an attraction which cannot fail to appeal to the friends of the violin. Miss Hanson's spirited and temperamental playing has won for her considerable celebrity, both locally and on tour.

Doubtless, the unique number on the program is the Irish ballad, "Phaudrig Crohoore" ("Patrick Connor") for mixed chorus, written by the famous English composer, Charles Villiers Stanford, which, alone, is sufficient to insure its gifted creator a place among the immortals.

The rollicking humor of the music, its true Irish lilt, and the occasional exquisite touches of pathos—all marvelously expressive of the words—must be heard to be truly appreciated. The poem is a "young Lochinvar" tale of bold young Phaudrig, so handsome, so masterful and brave, who carries off his beloved Kathleen on the very eve of her forced marriage to a man she does not love.

The wedding guests are assembled to celebrate the occasion in the blithe Irish fashion—only Kathleen, with heavy heart, sits apart, white and sad,—when, to every body's consternation, the door springs back and Phaudrig enters and demands of Kathleen whether this marriage is of her own free will or brought about by threats and fear. When he learns that she is still true to him, he picks her up, in defiance of all of them, flings her before him on his horse, and is off and away, before anyone realizes what has happened.

The 50 members of the Musical club chorus have been training for months on this ballad under the capable leadership of Dr. Charles G. Woolsey, so an exceptionally finished and characteristic performance is promised. Mr. George H. Hemus, as Phaudrig, is sure to captivate the audience with his droll Irish accent and animated rendition of the solo parts of the ballad.

The program, entire, will be as follows:

Chorus—"I Lombardi" ... Verdi
Director: Dr. Woolsey.
Quartet—Andante ... Spohr
Dawkins Violin Quartet.
Chorus—"Daybreak" ... Eaton Faning
Violin—"Zigeunerweisen" ... Sarasate
Regina Hanson.
Quartet—
Mondnacht ... Schumann
Scherzo ... Mendelssohn
Dawkins Violin Quartet.
Chorus—"Phaudrig Crohoore" ... J. Villiers Stanford

Around Festive Board

[illegible] the Cheyenne Mountain Country [club] last Wednesday, Mrs. Sherwood [Aldri]ch entertained a small company of [friends] at luncheon. Included were Mrs. [J.] McK. Ferriday, Mrs. Henry Rus[sell] [W]ray, Mrs. Duncan Chisholm, Mrs. [illegible] E. Curtin, Mrs. Horace G. [illegible], Mrs. Henry C. Hall, Mrs. Frank [illegible], Mrs. William F. Greenwood, [R]onald E. Curtis, Miss Innes.

[Mrs.] Verner Z. Reed entertained a [illegible] luncheon, yesterday after-noon in one of the private dining rooms at the Antlers. Covers were laid for 10.

One of the largest social events of the past week was the delightful buffet luncheon at 1:30 p. m. yesterday, given by Mrs. Franklin T. Metzler, 818 North Nevada avenue. The floral decorations were chiefly pink roses and asparagus plumosa. The 35 to 40 guests spent the afternoon in playing bridge.

Mrs. James McK. Ferriday entertains a few friends at luncheon today, at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club. Covers will be laid for eight.

In the Dutch room at the Acacia, yesterday at 1:30 o'clock, the members of the Minerva society of Colorado College gave a beautifully arranged luncheon in honor of Miss Mabel Emery, a bride-to-be, and one of their most popular members.

The centerpiece consisted of a mound of blue and white flowers forming a heart, the candlesticks held white candles with blue shades and all the decorations and the menu perpetuated the Minerva colors, blue and white.

Mrs. Florian Cajori, the toast mistress was most happy in her introduction of the speakers among whom were Miss Rule Aitken, Miss Ernestine Parsons, and Miss Phoebe Ward. Others present were Miss Lucile Parsons, Miss Edith Hall, Miss Julia Ingersoll, Miss Janet Kampf, Miss Ruth Londoner, Miss Margaret Mack, Miss Edith McCreery, Miss Mary McCreery, Miss Vida Pitts, Miss Emma Riggs, Miss Eunice Smith, Miss Anna Strang, Miss Mary Tucker, Miss Celia Collier, Miss Ethel McLain.

Mrs. Charles W. Howbert and her guests, Mrs. Joy Mesner of Nebraska City, Neb., and Mrs. Robert Lynes of Cripple Creek were the guests of honor at a picnic held last Wednesday in Stratton park. The hostesses were Mrs. Philo C. Hildreth and Mrs. Willard N. Burgess.

Mrs. Florian Cajori, 1119 Wood avenue, has issued invitations to the honorary members, the members of the Minerva alumnae and the members of the Minerva society for a 5 o'clock tea to take place Tuesday afternoon. The charming function will be in the nature of a farewell compliment to Miss Helen Woodsmall, who intends to go abroad this summer.

Mrs. William H. Spurgeon and Mrs. Frank A. Bissell, who have just completed two years as the secretaries of the Woman's Literary club, gave a delightful informal thimble party Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Spurgeon on North Tejon street, in compliment to the members of the club. With but a very few exceptions all were present. Delicious refreshments were served late in the afternoon.

The winners of the Bridge club elaborately entertained the losers at the residence of Mrs. Frank G. Peck on Friday, as a return compliment for the luncheon so handsomely given a few weeks ago in the Dutch room at the Acacia.

The winning side includes Mrs. Peck, Mrs. H. F. Avery, Mrs. G. S. Milone, Mrs. A. J. Bendle, Mrs. C. E. Titus, Mrs. E. D. Marr, Mrs. Lula Bernard, Mrs. C. E. Smith. The losing side includes Mrs. Lillian Yates, Mrs. F. R. Marsh, Mrs. Edmund Allen, Mrs. Claude Sachs, Mrs. A. B. Meservey, Mrs. A. May, Mrs. W. S. Boynton. The guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Daniel Thatcher and Mrs. J. B. Colt.

The losers were presented with solid silver souvenir spoons suitably inscribed. The prize was a solid silver salt and pepper set.

Large potted palms, ferns and other tropical growth decorated the billiard room where the luncheon was served. The polished table was laid with a real lace set and the flowers were pink and white sweet peas and maidenhair ferns. Tulip shaped shades veiled the electrolier and candles. The place cards were daintily ornamented in hand painted sweet peas. Pink and white prevailed in every accessory and, throughout, the luncheon was of exquisite appointment.

At the close of a business meeting of the St. Agnes guild of the St. Andrew's Episcopal church, held Tuesday afternoon at Hillcrest with Miss Ida Nichols, the members were given a happy surprise in the shape of an invitation to dine at the Cliff house. Miss Nichols' guests were Mrs. Carlos Smith, Mrs. Arthur James, Mrs. William Paulson, Miss Lottie Frizzell, Miss Margaret Gibbons, Miss Jean Fullerton, Miss Leonore Pollen, Miss Chloe Richmond, Miss Augusta Richmond, Miss Nellie Long, Miss Ina Campbell, Miss Nelle Martin, Miss Jennie Scott, Miss Annette Smith, Miss Dorothy Paulson, Miss Bertha Thornton, Miss Maud King, Miss Inez Lowther.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, 1015 North Nevada avenue, gave a dinner Thursday evening in celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of their marriage. The table was decorated with a large cluster of daybreak carnations and ferns.

Included in the party were Dr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Faust, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Marbourg, Mr. and Mrs. Willard N. Burgess, Mrs. Philo C. Hildreth, Mr. and Mrs. Seldomridge and their son, Mr. Gerald Seldomridge.

Mr. William Lennox will entertain the members of the Student Volunteer band of Colorado College, Wednesday evening, June 3 at his home, 1001 North Nevada avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dietrich entertained a party of friends at dinner at the Alamo hotel last Sunday evening. Covers were laid for 12. A special concert was given, afterwards by the Alamo orchestra of which Mr. Dietrich is the conductor. Assisting were Miss Mabel Harlan, Miss Grace Cozens, Miss Ruth Law; also, Fred Cope and David Williams of the Colorado School for the Deaf and Blind.

The Minerva society entertained the senior girls Friday afternoon at the residence of Miss Mabel Emery on North Nevada avenue. Miss Phoebe Ward gave the year's history of Minerva and the seniors presented a new song to the society which was written by Miss Emma Riggs. Music was also interspersed, and a clever charade enacted. After the serving of dainty refreshments, a business meeting was held. The election will take place later, probably the last of this week.

Engagements--Married

Mrs. Ada Burns Crapser and Dr. John Emery Sawyer, both of this city, were united in marriage last Wednesday afternoon in Newton, Kansas. The Rev. A. J. Finch, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, Denver, performed the ceremony in the Santa Fe waiting room during a twenty-minute stop, and Dr. Sawyer and bride resumed their journey to Kansas City where they are the guests of friends of Mrs. Sawyer.

Formal--Informal

A small thimble party was given by Mrs. Charles E. Noble, 118 East Monument street, Thursday afternoon, as a farewell to Mrs. Wright, wife of the Rev. Mr. Wright, who has accepted a pastorate in Holly, Colo., from June 1.

Some of those present were the Rev. and Mrs. Howard Agnew Johnston, Mrs. William C. Robinson, Mrs. John R. Robinson, Mrs. Edward M. De La Vergne, Mrs. Frederic A. Morath, Mrs. William W. Arnold, Mrs. Barton, Miss Shaw, Mrs. Charles B. Lauterman, Mrs. L. H. Gowdy.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Hoyt Stevens of the Alta Vista expect to go to Denver on Wednesday and spend a week with Mr. and Mrs. Channing Sweet. Thursday, they will participate in the complimentary excursion tendered the Hotel Men's association by the Moffat road. Sunday, May 31, Mr. and Mrs. Sweet will give a dinner party in celebration of Mr. Stevens' birthday and the thirty-seventh anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Stevens.

Senior night will be observed by the Pearsons society of Colorado College in their club house next Friday evening.

The annual reception in honor of the graduating class of the Colorado Springs High School will be given by the C. S. H. S. Alumni association, Friday, June 12, 1908, at 8 p. m., at the Alta Vista hotel.

The dancing season at the fine large pavilion in Stratton park was most auspiciously opened last Monday evening with the ball of the Pikes Peak Press club. More than 2,000 people were in attendance and the scene was one of especial brilliancy.

The far too brief concert program was a delightful prelude to the dance program of a dozen numbers consisting of two-steps and waltzes. The latter was considerably lengthened owing to insistent encores to which the director, Professor Harry T. Irvine, obligingly responded. More than 500 couples were upon the floor during the entire evening and it was with reluctance that the cars were boarded, homeward bound, when the last sweet strains of music ceased to reverberate upon the balmy moonlit atmosphere.

To celebrate the fifteenth birthday anniversary of her son, Frederick Palmer Morath, Mrs. Frederick A. Morath, 17 East Jefferson street, gave a party Friday evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. Frederic was presented with a fine base ball club by his boy friends. Games, music and an abundant supper each had due part in a merry evening. Miss Adams assisted Mrs. Morath in entertaining and serving.

Participating were Fredonia Brown, Helen Howard, Mabel White, Jessie and Margaret Cameron, Florence Mack, Marguerite Percival, Georgia Urquhart, Helen Lennox, Gwendolin Boynton, Nellie Richardson, Reba Shoup, Juliaetta and Maria Seldomridge; John Armit, Lynn S. Atkinson, Jr., Hanford Upton, Howard Cox, Burdett Root, Harvey McKenzie, William Thomas, John Dixon, John Jacobs, Wilson Allen, Edgar Hill, Renick Gregg, Harold Shoup, [illegible] Eubank, Edwin Rollestone.

A musical tea was given by the ladies of the Steele Kindergarten association Friday afternoon. The steady downpour of rain threatened to interfere with the plans of the association, but the members proved that they have an interest in the school that cannot be dampened by so trivial a matter as a shower, and the kindergarten quarters were crowded to overflowing with interested patrons and friends of the association.

The first part of the program was given by the little tots of the kindergarten, under the direction of Miss Margaret B. Speer, director of the class, and they rendered their recitations and songs with the unconscious grace and sweetness so characteristic of little children.

After the class had finished its share the program the visitors were still further entertained by a reading and musical numbers given by some of the ladies present. The program in full follows:

Song ... "The Tulips"
School.
Recitation ... "Pretty Pussy"
Charles Wright.
Song ... "Wake, Says the Sunshine"
School.
Recitation ... "The Rain Coach"
James Strachan.
Song ... "Over the Bare Hills"
Thelma Atkinson, Regina Aitken, Wealthy Johnson, Stella Russell, Margaret Upton, Jo Atkinson, George Roberts, James Jacobs, James Strachan.
Song ... "Five Little Mice"
Elizabeth Fertig.
Song ... "Teddy Bear"
Elizabeth Howbert, Stella Russell, Wealthy Johnson, Lauraine Allen, Elizabeth Fertig.
Song ... "The Hurdy Gurdy Man"
Margaret Upton.
Song ... "My Old Dan"
Jo Atkinson, James Jacobs, George Forester, Charles Wright, George Roberts.
Song ... "Baby Bunting"
Wealthy Johnson.
Vocal solo ...
Mrs. W. W. Flora.
Piano solo ...
Miss Annie Bispham.
Vocal solo ...
Miss Isabel Morrison.
Reading ...
Mrs. Morath.
Vocal solo ...
Miss Marie Rolli.

After the completion of the program the visitors were invited into the adjoining room, which was tastefully decorated in pink, and were served with refreshments. Miss Jacobs served the punch and Mrs. Barnes poured the tea, Mesdames Upton Purdy and Morath assisting.

"Monday, May 18, I will be one year old, and I want you to come to my house and help me celebrate, because I never was one year old before. Bring your mamma, so that she may play with my mamma, while we talk from two to five."

The foregoing invitations were issued by Charles Wilfred Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Black, 1424 North Nevada avenue, to the following guests: Harold Knight Pomeroy, Charles Mitchell, Roy Binkert, George Damon Hagemeyer, Gordon Wright Monfort, Leonard Whitbeck, Miss Doris Wilson and Miss Frances Sibert.

A single candle on the cake was the centerpiece and the place cards were tied to sticks of peppermint candy. Dainty refreshments, suited to infantile tastes, were served.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Shellenberger were tendered an enjoyable surprise, Thursday afternoon, when about 40 of their friends from Hermione temple No. 1, Pythian Sisters, gathered in their home on North Corona street, to assist them in celebrating the second anniversary of their marriage.

Mrs. Shellenberger had planned a surprise for her husband by inviting the Unique Dinner club, of which they are members, to a 6 o'clock dinner, so did not dream that she, too, was to be surprised.

Mrs. J. B. Flack, Mrs. C. B. Howard and Miss Willa Thompson assisted Mrs. Shellenberger in receiving. There was a fine musical and literary program prepared by Mrs. Flack, Mrs. Wyman, Miss Norma Wyman and Master Donald McPherson, and then a six-course dinner was served. American Beauty roses and asparagus plumosa, together with potted ferns, gave a gala air to the different rooms.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Horn, who celebrated, upon the same date, their thirty-seventh wedding anniversary. Many useful presents were received by the host and hostess, besides the profusion of flowers, Mrs. C. B. Howard making the presentation speech.

Those participating were: Mesdames B. F. Howard, H. Berger, Celia Wyman, G. H. Wulfe, W. M. Allen, Dennis, McPherson, Beatrice Hutor, Ellen Horn, Willa Thompson, Norma Wyman, Mattie W. Thompson, Fannie E. Hiner, M. J. Stanton, J. M. Counts, Hagerty, Bert Babcock, Charles Cramer, May, Dennis, Henry, J. B. Flack, McCreary, Ellison, Taylor, Cohen, M. E. Flack, Bowers, Misses Elvira Hagerty, Madge Richards, Toland Ina Hemenway, Messrs. John Grant, J. M. Hemenway, Alfred Richards and others.

Mrs. A. S. Boynton and Mrs. William Thompson entertained the Ladies' Aid society of the Congregational church Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Boynton on Ruxton avenue. Those present were: Mesdames Lacock, Sevitz, H. J. Ross, J. Carue, Field, Dake, W. Carson, Lewis, Sidney Francisco, H. S. Francisco, Redenbaugh, Cross, Baker, Murphy, Douglass, Bruce, Mitchell, Ahl, Robbins, Hampshire, Neely, Barker, Brown, Meador and the Misses Fellows, Lacock, and Carruthers. Refreshments were served.

The Apollonian club of Colorado College observed the annual "Senior night" Friday, in the club house. An address of welcome was made by the new president, Mr. J. C. Calhoun. Mr. Harry Ewing, the retiring president, spoke on the theme, "A Few Reflections." The Junior prophecy was given by Mr. William Lennox, Jr. Other speakers were Mr. G. W. Smith and Mr. James Fisk. There was vocal music by a quartet and a duet by Messrs. Hillie and Norton.

Before and After

Coffee berries will retain their good qualities indefinitely before roasting—in fact, they improve with age, but after roasting it is altogether different. Roasting brings the essential oil close to the surface, and it will dry out in a very short time, leaving the coffee flavorless and insipid.

That's why our

Mexican Brand of 35c Coffee

which is roasted daily at our plant on Huerfano street is superior to package coffee that have been roasted several weeks, perhaps months.

A MINIATURE.

Better than aught else on the earth to me
This tiny portrait on a ribbon blue;
Smiling, it seems, at fate and destiny,
Sweet, holy, true—
A little picture of my world—just you!

Oh! smile at me thro' life's deep-shadowed days,
Smile thro' the bitterness and grief I know;
Bring back to me the wild-rose shaded ways,
Now frost and snow
Have fallen where the flowers used to grow.

Better to me than fame or wealth or treasure,
Just these grave eyes of yours that smile,
And bring Hope's over-brimming measure,
Love's pain and pleasure,
To solace my poor, breaking heart awhile.

Oh! little face, dear gift of Heaven! Remain,
To cheer my soul, to wipe away my tears,
To bid me rest, and hope to find again
Life's deeper meaning of the use of pain—
Life's charm and pity, through the empty years!
—Mabel Greenwood.

COURAGE ALL!

Old gods avaunt! The rosy East is waking,
And in the dawn your shapes of clay are shaking;
Ye broke men's hearts, and now your spells are breaking.

Over all lands a winged hope is flying;
It goes without reproof, without replying;
It bears God's courage to the dulled and dying.

The rusted chain that bound the world is broken;
A new strange star is pricking night for token;
And the Great Word is waiting to be spoken!
—Edwin Markham in January Nautilus.

STAND STILL.

Stand still; and thou shalt know
The glory of the Lord.
The shadow of a flying bird
Upon the Summer grass;
The silver day's decline, rain-blurred,
The Springtime's early mass;
The soft brown veil that Autumn flings,
The white still days that Winter brings;
The silent anthem of the night,
The sweet, mysterious dawn of light—

Stand still; and these will show
The glory of the Lord.
—Selected.

PROOF OF SYMPATHY.

Dr. Whewell, master of Trinity college, Cambridge, was a great but unpopular man. When he entered the Senate house it was the ill-manned practice of the undergraduates to begin a loud and continuous whistle.

"How this originated I do not know," writes Dean Farrar in his book, "Men I Have Known." "There were two legends about it. One was that it intimated that the master would have to whistle for a bishopric; the other, equally absurd, was that when some one had asked him how to pronounce his name he had said, 'You must shape your mouth as if you were going to whistle.'"

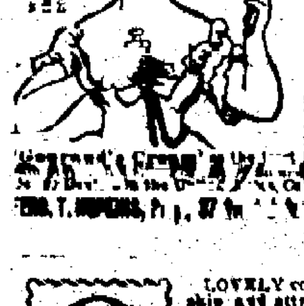

But under the rough manners of the students there was a genuine goodness of heart. Dr. Whewell's wife died. He had been tenderly devoted to her, and when he attended chapel after her death the undergraduates were touched by an "old man's anguish and a strong man's tears."

"When next he entered the Senate house," writes Dean Farrar, "there was dead silence. For the first time for I known not how many years, not a whistle was heard, and then a moment afterward, as by spontaneous impulse, the crowded mass of undergraduates in the gallery burst into a loud and long continued cheer. It was not astonishing that such proof of sympathy should move the heart of the great master of that the tears should run down his cheeks. I do not think that he was ever whistled at again."

Woman's Club Events

IT IS regretted that Colorado Springs club women will not be largely represented at the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's clubs to convene in Boston, Mass., June 23 to 30, inclusive, as one of Colorado's ablest women, Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denver, will be the presiding officer. Mrs. Decker has won particular distinction, not alone in club work, but in all the great reform and educational movements of the day. Her utterances from the platform and her articles in the newspapers and periodicals are eagerly sought for and carry untold influence for good.

One of the late bulletins issued by the biennial press committee gives the followings items of interest concerning the biennial:

A meeting of the council of presidents will be held at Chickering hall, Tuesday, June 23, 1908, at 9:30 a. m., at which the following subjects will be considered:

Duty of the General Federation of Women's Clubs Toward other National Organizations. Duty of National Organizations Toward the General Federation. Delegates and their Duties. Transfer of Memberships. Business Obligations of Clubs. The Biennial Report.

Thursday afternoon, June 25, will be given over to social functions. There will be a general reception at the state house, and various receptions at private homes. Miss Helen M. Winslow is chairman of the reception committee.

Tuesday morning, June 30, at Symphony hall, there will be an open hour at which the following topics will be discussed:

Press Problems—
- Justice in Journalism.
- The Sunday Supplement.
- The Personal Appeal.
- The Telephone Interview.

Social Amenities—
- Wedding Gifts.
- Christmas Gifts.
- Perverted Hospitality.

TO LOOK WELL WHEN ILL.

Mrs. Evan Nepean in Home Magazine.

The fashion plate—to use the old-established term—represents a woman always young, always beautiful, and always perfectly well. We who consider and confine her attention to the subject her manifold perfections are sometimes filled with "envy," as well as envy, at the sight. We may still be young and beautiful, many of us, but to be always perfectly well is given to but few; in fact, in these days of modish cures and treatments and diets, it is almost bourgeoise to be in what is bourgeoisely called "rude health."

Every woman with a love of pretty things—"things" stands for clothes and everything appertaining to clothes—carries her love into her private life as fully as into her public one, her appearance in town and at country houses, at the opera, her parties, her dinners (in public and private), her life from morning till night spent before the world.

There comes a time to every woman when her world has for boundaries her four bedroom walls, and she may turn her thoughts from her smart frocks "eating their heads off in the wardrobe," to dressing gowns, from the most elaborate saut-de-lit, the nightgown in all its manifold incarnations, the dressing jacket, the sleeping jacket, the sitting-up jacket, the jacket in which, becomingly propped up by pillows, prettily negligee as to coiffure, perchance with a dainty frilled cap or lace scarf draped about head and throat, she receives the visit of her best friend and that friend's condolences, flowers, and assurance that "bed is the best place this weather, and I wish to goodness I could take to mine."

Now, the trouble is that we generally take to our beds because we have to, not because we want to; but in the case of a lengthened convalescence, or an illness which includes neither surgical dressing nor thermometers, there is a certain amount of scope for "pretty things."

Personally, I firmly believe all invalids should be encouraged to be a little vain! The woman who is really ill does not come into this article; it is written for those who are able to see their friends now and then, and who like to talk to their nurses (most charming people, so keen in their profession, and yet so interested in all outside of it) of other matters than their next dose of medicine or their custard pudding. Without going as far as to advocate rose-colored curtains for the doctor, surely it is no bad compliment to "look tidy" when he comes, and, as he is but human, it is hardly likely he prefers to find one in a gray knitted shawl and one's hair in curlers, or, worse, straggling rats' tails. One's "appearance" is an elusive possession, too, frequently and the woman who neglects her hair and the skin and refuses to take the slightest pains with her looks may find on her return to a public life that she has lost for good what charm of person she once possessed. And there is no doubt that 99 women out of 100 are happier for being prettily and becomingly "arrayed," even if it be in bed. It cheers many an invalid to be able to contemplate a softly-falling cascade of lace and voluminous frills escaping from faintly-tinted silken sleeves upon a silken coverlet, probably artfully "matching." It does one good to be bien mise.

Briefly, to be ill is not to be ugly. The requirements, sartorially considered, of the convalescent or her who is suffering from "bed-idleness," as an invalid of my acquaintance calls it, are [illegible]

[illegible] pleated muslin cap, even that in a close-fitting Dutch shape, can be easily concocted, and inexpensively; it serves the double purpose of concealing hair gray or scanty through ill health, or of that kind which is never becoming when loose, and it also keeps the head and face warm in cases of neuralgia and kindred ills. The bed jacket can be made of a variety of charming remnants, if one possesses a clever hand or "little woman" who comes in to work; if not, the quilted Japanese coats, warmest and lightest of their kind, are within the reach of all purses, to quote from the language of the catalogue. Then, if something less warm than these be needed, the ever-invaluable French flannel, which washes with the most virtuous rectitude in the matter of neither shrinking nor losing color, is always at hand.

Then, too, silks of various sorts, flannel or flannelette lined, are to be considered, especially washing ones, and very pretty there are nowadays. I like the new method of making a sitting-up jacket like a cape, to be frankly Hibernian, and I do not see why the Inverness model should not be pressed into the service. A cape wants a suggestion of sling sleeves, or at any rate loops to attach it to the wrists, or the arms become uncovered and get chilly.

There is a clever little arrangement which is simplicity itself in the manner of construction. It is made of a square of figured flannel slashed up one of the points and just a trifle of the goods cut out from the middle to form the neck opening. The edges are faced with a two-inch band of silk and the two points which serve as sleeves (?) are held under the arms with ribbon fastening just under the elbow in coquettish little bows.

The question of extra wraps is really now one of individual taste. Personally, I prefer everything washable, so keep to the large white woolen shawls, which are light and warm, moderate in price, and capable of being washed two or three times.

The nightgown question is a vexed one for the invalid. The present fashion of making them mostly in the empire shape, with square-cut necks and no collars, is useless to the chilly woman, who has to choose between a nightgown of woolen material or an over-jacket. I sympathize with many people who can not bear wool next their skin, but, of course, the absence of it enforces a jacket, and many people always wear the wool of some sort or another. They need not be ugly [illegible], but I think they come to grief when their frills are washed. To have plain white woolen material, simply made, and to provide it with a variety of collars and cuffs or deep frills of fine muslin and embroidery, wash silk or lace, and half a dozen other combinations that will at once suggest themselves, to be buttoned on at will, and washed and cleaned separately, seems to [illegible] by far the best plan to adopt.

BEFORE AND BEHIND.

There was a soul one eve autumnal sailing
Beyond the earth's dark bars,
Towards the land of sunsets never paling,
Towards the heaven's sea of stars.
Behind there was a wake of billows tossing
Before a glory lay.
O happy soul! with all sails set, just crossing
Into the far away;
The gloom and gleam, the calmness and the strife,
Were death before thee, and behind thee life.

And as that soul went onward, sweetly speeding
Unto its home and light,
Repentance made it sorrowful exceeding,
Faith made it wondrous bright;
Repentance dark with shadowy recollections
And longings unsufficed,
Faith white and pure with sunniest affections
Full from the face of Christ.
[illegible]t both across the sun-besilvered tide
Helped to the haven where the heart would ride.

TRANSFIGURED.

To careless eyes she is not fair;
This verdict careless lips declare,
And wonder why, against the charm
Of beauty vivid, rich and warm,
The face they deem so cold and dull
To him should be so beautiful.

Are they too dull to see aright?
Hath he a quicker, keener sight?
Or is it that indifference
Than love hath clearer, truer sense?
Now is he right or wrong? Oh, say,
Doth he behold her face or they?

Her eyes into his own eyes shine
With strange illumining; a sign
Is on her brow; a palimpsest
To his own gaze alone confessed;
On him, in gravely gracious mood,
She smiles her soul's beatitude.

This is the face she turns to him;
O say, not 'tis a lover's whim
That finds it fair; nor are they dull
Who say she is not beautiful.
For, strangest of all mysteries,
They never see the face he sees—
The face no artist's skill can limn,
The love-fair face she turns to him.
—Carlotta Perry.

MAN'S LOVE AND WOMAN'S.

A woman only knoweth love
To know that it is passing sweet,
To know that all her heart is glad,
Or else to know that she is sad
Because it failed her; and forsooth,
I think she has an extra sense
To love by granted not to man;
Love's measureless own recompense
Consists in loving; there's her creed.
A pretty thought, in faith or deed!
A feminine fair thought, but false
To man forever! false as light
To the born blind, as painted fruit
To starving lips; or as a bright
Departing sail to drowning eyes.
Man loveth in another way!
He cannot take the less without
The more; he has a bitter way
In loving, that you know not of.
—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP.

Two figures walked with me beside the sea—
The one was Love, the other Friendship true—
Each clasped a hand, "Throughout eternity
We both shall live and never part from you."

One figure sat with me beside the sea
And softly stroked my hair and held my hand;
'Twas Friendship true that sat and wept with me,
For Love lay cold and dead upon the sand.
—Margaret Hobson.

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure and healthy the skin will be soft, smooth and free from all eruptions or disease, but when the circulation becomes infected with any unhealthy humor the effect is shown by eruptions, pimples, boils, or some more definitely marked skin disorder, such as Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Psoriasis, Salt Rheum, etc.

Humors get into the blood, usually because of an inactive or sluggish condition of those members whose duty it is to collect and carry off the waste matter and refuse of the system. This unhealthy matter is left to sour and ferment and be absorbed into the blood, and soon the circulation becomes filled with an acrid, irritating humor.

The blood then, instead of performing its natural duty of nourishing the skin, regulating its temperature and preserving its uniform softness, pliability and healthfulness, irritates and diseases the delicate tissues and fibers around the pores and glands and produces some of the various forms of skin eruption or disease.

The cause of all skin affections can be traced to some kind of humor in the blood. Healthy cuticles are only possible where the circulation is pure; and therefore the cure of any skin disease can only come from a thorough cleansing of this vital fluid. Salves, washes, lotions, etc., cannot cure. True such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, helps to reduce inflammation, and aids in keeping the affected parts clean, but it does not reach the blood, where the real cause is located, and at best can be only palliative and soothing.

For six years I was severely troubled with Ec[illegible] principally on the shin bones, caused by a [illegible] in the blood. The trouble would appear in the form of small [illegible] blisters, characterized by itching, etc. I tried sarsaparilla, so-called blood purifiers, salves, ointments, lotions and treatment under a local physician, but [illegible] did any good. RELATIVE VALUE OF IMPROVED AND UNIMPROVED HOMES.

Williamson Says Money Spent for Trees, Grass, Walks, Etc., Will Return Four-Fold.

W. W. Williamson, the well-known real estate man of this city, read an interesting paper on "The Relative Value of Improved and Unimproved Home Surroundings" at the regular meeting of the El Paso County Horticultural society last Tuesday night in which he strongly recommended the improvement of all property as the best means of advancing its value and creating a ready market for it. The paper in full follows:

Theoretically, the value of an improved lot or tract of land is found by taking the value of the premises unimproved and adding to it the cost of the improvements, but the effects of the improvements are sometimes so far reaching that it is often impossible to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the problem.

In the West one of the best means of increasing the value of farm lands has been by the development of water rights. Government statistics show that in 1899 there were 5,471,641 acres under irrigation, and there are now approximately 17,000,000 acres under irrigation.

The time is not now far distant when the irrigated lands of the West will support as many people as are now supported by all the farm lands east of the Mississippi river. A friend of mine is interested in a company owning a large tract of land in this county, part of which is under irrigation and the balance above the ditch. They are vainly trying to sell the dry land for $10 per acre while they are freely disposing of the other for $125 per acre.

Another way of improving the land is by the planting of fruit trees. A good deal of care should be exercised in the selecting of the varieties and the care of the trees after they are planted. A tract of land set in fruit trees will grow in value from year to year as the trees grow in size and productiveness. Orchards in certain sections of the state sell as high as $1,000 to $1,500 per acre, while the unimproved irrigable land brings only $20 to $100 per acre.

Fortune in Fruit.

At the last meeting of the State Realty Dealers' association held in this city, Mr. Aupperle of Grand Junction told us of one cherry tree in the Grand valley which is 12 years old and has in the past five years yielded an average of $30 worth of fruit each year. No year did the yield fall below $20 and in one year it amounted to $40.

At the same meeting Mr. Udlock of Grand Junction, Colo., reported that in 1907, when the frost destroyed one-half the crop, the output of 6,000 acres of orchard near Grand Junction amounted to $600,000, or $100 per acre. Mr. Bancroft of Palisades gave the names of several fruit growers in his section. One man sold $1,000 worth of Elberta peaches from $150 trees. Another man received $6,000 from five acres of Bartlett pears. Another netted $2,800 from three and one-fourth acres of apples and peaches. Still another received $1,400 per acre from his Bartlett and Peabury pears.

A man near Montrose purchased 320 acres of land for $250 per acre, expended $50 per acre more in setting out peach trees and in three years sold the property for $1,000 per acre.

Another man in Delta county died and left his wife and three children no money. He also left her nine acres of land which had a short time before been planted to pear trees. She managed to hold on to the land and now she spends her winters in California and devotes the rest of her time to the care of the orchard. Her net income in one season was $900 per acre, or $8,100 for the whole tract.

All you have to do in the fruit business is to plant and care for the trees, wait a few years while you are raising other crops on the ground between the trees and then gather the harvest. The Lord does the rest.

But I presume when this subject was assigned to me it was intended that I should confine myself chiefly to the improvement of city property, more especially dwellings and home premises.

Improved Property.

All real estate men will agree with me when I say that it is much easier to dispose of a piece of property when the buildings are in good repair and well painted, when there is a fine lawn and the shrubbery shows signs of receiving skilful attention and when the grounds are laid out in an artistic and attractive manner. And when one realizes that a good deal of the work required to put a property in a condition to sell at the highest price can be done in the mornings and evenings before or after business hours and that the women and children of the household can do a great deal of the work; that the most of the finished product represents labor and not a cash outlay; that a good deal of this so-called labor is in reality recreation and becomes an ever-increasing source of joy and pride, not only to the laborer but also to all his neighbors and friends; when we think of all these its seems almost incredible that there should be so many unimproved houses in an attractive and progressive city like Colorado Springs.

Some Comparisons.

Why is property north of Pikes Peak avenue more valuable than that south of Pikes Peak? Is it not chiefly because the lawns and shrubbery are better kept and the premises are more pleasing to the eye? Why is Nevada avenue and North Cascade better property than North Tejon? Is it not on account of the parking in the streets? Have you not noticed how one vacant lot or neglected piece of property will depreciate the value of all the property in a whole block? Surely the axiom that no man liveth unto himself is true in this respect. Perhaps you will say there is a better class of people living north of Pikes Peak avenue or at least they think they are better than [illegible]. Is that so? If you think [illegible] why is it so? Do not birds of a feather flock together? Can you not [illegible] the wild ducks to your ranch by making a reservoir? If the people [illegible] of Pikes Peak avenue as a whole [illegible] take as much interest in improving their property as those [illegible] of the avenue, would not this distinction soon [illegible] to an end? Have [illegible] noticed how hard it is to dispose of a property at any price where [illegible] the lawn and the [illegible] fill the back [illegible]. Did you ever notice that these [illegible] when they are sold are [illegible] but are purchased by specula[tors] who at once begin to improve the property and thus [illegible] a double [illegible] first profit [illegible] the property [illegible] leaving the [illegible] The [illegible] improve[illegible] [illegible] years ago I had listed with me for sale a house and two lots in Colorado City which had been neglected so long that it was almost impossible to find a purchaser. Finally I sold the property for $400 and the man who bought it spent $125 in improving the premises. After that he wanted to borrow some money and I secured for him a $500 loan on the property and finally sold it for $1,-200. In this case the $125 he spent on the improvements brought him in $675, or more than 400 per cent profit, all in one year.

Good Tenants.

Are you a tenant? Do you know if you take good care of your landlord's property and keep in looking as attractive as possible at all times, looking after the lawn and trees as well the interior of the house, the landlord will offer extra inducements to retain you as a tenant? I know persons in this town who have been living in the same rented houses for years and nearly all the time they have been paying less rent than they should under ordinary circumstances. Alas! I know other people who find it hard work to rent a house at any price. It is well to consider that after all there are usually two sides to every question and not always are both sides right. If you are a renter why worry over the fact that you are increasing the value of your landlord's property if by so doing you are making the home more attractive to your family and at the same time you are causing your landlord to feel under obligations to you for selecting his house as your place of residence. You will probably also succeed in securing a pleasant home at a low rental while the landlord looks to the increased value for profit on his investment.

Gives Advice.

Why is it not better to own your own home and thus receive for yourself all the advantages accruing to the landholder. The man who owns his own home has more influence in the community in which he lives than does the renter who is looked upon more or less as a transient. Other things being equal he also finds it easier to secure and hold on to a position. One is constantly making improvements and changes which have a tendency to enhance the value of the property in which he resides. How much easier is it to improve your own property and thus get returns in dollars and cents for your work? There are very few heads of families in this city who can give any valid reasons why they should not own their own homes. The great tendency of the age seems to be to spend the monthly salary as quickly as it is earned. It matters not whether the salary is $50 per month or $500, it all goes. Desirable property can be purchased on the installment plan, and it is comparatively easy for the average American citizen, be he laborer, mechanic, clerk or salaried officer, to save enough from his wages or salary to acquire a home. It is not what a man makes that enables him to get ahead in the world; it is what he saves. We all have some luxuries which we can dispense with if it becomes necessary and some of them might even be dispensed with advantageously before it becomes a necessity. While all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, all play and no work makes Jack's father an undesirable citizen.

Value of Improvements.

I think it is perhaps too conservative to say that trees, shrubbery and lawn when properly cared for add at least 25 per cent to the value of a lot or tract of land whether the same is occupied by a house or not. A house and lot costing $4,000, without a beautiful yard, after the advent of trees, shrubbery and lawn, sell more readily for $5,000 than it would before for $4,000.

I know of a place in this city where the house is worth probably $1,500 and the barn and outbuildings as much more, but there is one of the finest lawns in the city with a number of beautiful elms, maples and other trees and the shrubbery is artistically arranged. The ground is worth $2,500 if we estimate the value by the price asked for adjoining property. Add to this the value of the buildings and you have $5,500 and yet the owner refused to accept a $10,000 offer for the property. I know another instance where a lot was bought for $800 by paying $20 down and the balance on or before two years. The purchaser at once set out a number of good sized cottonwood trees and when the final payment became due he had no trouble in borrowing $1,000 on the property and later refused to accept $2,800 for the lot. The increased value was entirely owing to the improvement made by the trees and the beautiful condition in which the adjoining property was kept. Another point that is sometimes overlooked is that trees and shrubbery and hardy plants grow in value from year to year. People frequently pay from $25 to $50 for individual trees which on account of their size make a quicker growth, but any tree takes time to get used to its new home, and it is better to do your planting this year rather than next year or the year after. Small trees are easier to transplant and grow better when set out than do older ones and then you have the pleasure of training and watching them grow. It is safe to say that a tree planted this spring which cost $1 will be worth $2 next year, $4 the third year, $8 the fourth year, $16 the fifth year and one dollar more each year thereafter.

How to Water Lawns.

There is a great deal of ignorance exhibited by a great many persons in the manner in which they water their lawns. Most people use entirely too much water. Two or three hours a day is sufficient time in which to water any lawn and most of them would be better if they were sprinkled only one hour a day. I never water my lawn two days in succession in the same place, consequently when scarcity of water occurs, and you know it occurs at least once every year, my lawn is toughened and better able to stand the drought.

How to Plant.

Not only do trees and shrubbery add a great deal to the value of real estate, but the value varies not only according to varieties that are planted, but also according to the manner in which they are planted. Shrubbery is usually more effective in groups. Flower beds should be made in different sizes and shapes. A winding walk looks better in many places than a straight one. A gravel walk is sometimes better than cement. Ash pits, rear fences, and outbuildings can be covered with vines or screened by shrubbery. Ditch banks should be kept neat and clean. How often have I seen a place beautifully kept inside the fence while the walks on the street in front received no attention and weeds were allowed to grow undisturbed along the edge of the ditch. If every householder would look after the weeds in front of his place clear out to the center of the street and keep the lawn on both sides of the walk in first class condition, what a wonderful improvement there would be in our city?

Favors Paving.

Next to trees and buildings, good roads and sidewalks are important and add more in dollars and cents perhaps to the value of property than anything else. I am heartily in favor of paving at least in the business section of this city. The pride which so many cities take in their beautifully paved streets seem to be well placed. Sidewalks are [illegible] perhaps our dry climate [illegible] little behind the times in this respect. The true patriot is in favor of the greatest good for the greatest number and it is that principle which is at the foundation of all human government. Consequently the city puts down the sidewalk where the property owner fails to do so and permits the property owner to pay for it.

No one should be allowed to permit dandelions or noxious weeds to go to seed on his premises. Contagious diseases can be quarantined but not noxious seeds. For the same reason the cottony scale and other insect pests should not be tolerated. If you do not care for the looks of your own place you have no right to make your neighbor suffer loss by reason of your neglect. As Mr. Lilly stated to you in an address a short time ago, the unsightly, unwarranted billboards are a public nuisance and there is no doubt that they have a tendency to depreciate the value of all the property in their vicinity and should be prohibited by law.

The city fathers evidently do not think so as at their last meeting they passed a resolution permitting the placing of bill-boards in the street around the new Federal building. Many of us think a neatly painted fence without signs would be better.

Cheaper Insurance.

I am glad that the insurance companies have decided to make an active campaign for cleaner cities, and when people realize that cleanliness means cheaper insurance, the El Paso County Horticultural society will have more general co-operation than ever before in its efforts to clean up the city and keep it clean.

The following extract from a circular letter recently sent all the insurance agents of Colorado Springs and Colorado City by Mr. M. J. Burns, manager of the Rocky Mountain Fire Underwriters association, is significant:

"We beg to call your attention particularly to 'condition changes' and to urge all agents to use their influence to secure thorough cleaning up of basements, back yards, alleys, and all places where accumulation of rubbish is found, through which fires may originate or spread from place to place. Get this done first before asking for reduction for other improvements."

"A thorough cleaning up of a town beautifies it, improves sanitary conditions and reduces fire hazard. Let Colorado Springs and Colorado City be 'spotless' towns, and all interests will reap a reward."

The Moral Side.

But perhaps the greatest value to improved home surroundings comes from the effect which they have upon the moral life of the community. God intended every human to have a share of the sunlight, growing plants and trees and the farther you get away from the sunlight and green trees the farther you get away from nature's God. In every city you will find the so-called slums are places where there are no flowers, no vegetable gardens, no trees or shrubbery and but very little sunshine. Children who are brought up amid such surroundings are dreadfully handicapped and are more than likely to join the ranks of the criminals at an early age. How often do the worst boys in the neighborhood come from the houses which are not very attractive. Every child should be taught to take an interest in his own home. Give him a flower bed, a part of the garden to take care of or something else about the place to do and then show him how to do it right. It may be a little irksome at first but it will soon become a pleasure. Do not, however, go to the other extreme and give him so much to do that he will become disgusted. An ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure and if some of our civic authorities would pay a little more attention to the aesthetic ideas they perhaps would not be kept so busy hunting out and punishing criminals. For this reason our school houses are much handsomer now than they used to be. The grounds are beautiful and well kept; flowers are kept in the school room, some of the schools have gardens connected with them and prizes are offered for the best kept tracts. Arbor day is a regular institution and birds and flowers are popular topics for composition.

TARIFF TAX ON THE PRESS

How Paper Duty Enables Trust to Uphold Prices.

From a Speech in the House by Representative Hammond, of Minnesota.

On January 7 of this year the market price of the grade of paper used by the Minneapolis Tribune was $52 a ton. Until recently that grade of paper was purchased by the Tribune for $38 a ton. It consumes approximately 6,000 tons of paper a year. At $38 a ton its print-paper expense approximated $228,000 annually, while at the rate of $52 a ton it will be $312,000 a year, an increase of $84,000 a year. But that is not the end of the story. The publishers were unofficially notified of a probable still further increase of $10 a ton during the current year.

Of course this great increase is not directly due to the imposition of tariff tax, which is, I believe, 30 cents a hundred, or $6 a ton. The Paper trust and the paper association know how to take advantage of a tariff rate as well as the other trusts and monopolies. If a foreign competitor is attracted to the markets of this country by the high prices obtained from purchasers and establishes agencies, offices and all the necessary adjuncts of a permanent trade, at no inconsiderable expense, the price of print paper will go down. With $6.00 a ton advantage over the foreign paper maker, our manufacturers, who make their paper with just as little expense, can sell at a profit of $3 a ton, and force the outsider, who pays $6 to enter the market, to sell at a loss of $1 a ton in order to meet their price. No wonder the territory is not invaded, but left to the control of the overcapitalized companies exploiting it and fattening on the high price paid by the purchaser of print paper.

The man who declared there was nothing new under the sun may have been speaking of novels.

A CARD

The Chicago Tent and Awning Co. makes a specialty of building house and all other kinds of tents. We also inclose porches and make all kinds of awnings. When in need of any of the above, call and inspect our work and get our prices. Being out of the high rent district, we can and will give you better prices than our competitors. Our work can not be excelled. We also carry a full line of new and second-hand furniture, camp stoves, etc., and can furnish your tent at a very low figure. We are the pioneer tent and awning makers of this town, established 1885. A comparison of prices and workmanship is requested.

When the Breach Was Closed

By Edwin Carlile Litsey

COPYRIGHT

TWO men rode down a stony gorge in the Kentucky mountains one soft night in summer. They rode knee to knee, which was several ours late last night stirrup to stirrup, silently. The moonlight fell brokenly through the trees and vines and bushes. The men were far past middle life. The beard of one was gray and the beard of the other was white, but they rode sturdily and upright. Upon the crupper of the horse on the right a little girl was seated astride, with her arms around the man as far as they would go. The men were thoroughly a part of the wild scenery which surrounded and enveloped them. Their clothing was of the coarsest kind; the unearthly glamour of the witch-light falling over them could not hide their unkempt appearance—their obvious scorn of personal seeming. But the horses were sleek and in good trim. Down the gorge, through the moonlight, rode the queer pair, stirrup to stirrup, never speaking.

For more years than a person of that region could vouchsafe with any degree of accuracy there had been trouble, deep and deadly, on Crowfoot. Crowfoot was a trifurcated spur of the Cumberlands, and from one end to the other the ground was hostile. The Skidmores lived on the point further east, and the Buckley's lived on the point further west; and the intervening point of the spur—completing Crowfoot—was without occupants. Wild Bill Skidmore was the head of his clan, and Long Jake Buckley was the head of his. They had it from their fathers, and their fathers from their grandfathers, that years ago a Skidmore had wronged a Buckley, or vice versa, according to who was telling the tale, and that constant and continued bloodshed was the only means of redress.

It was blackest treason for a man of one house to look upon a girl of the opposite clan with any feeling save that of disgust and hatred, and it was equal heresy for a girl to accept attentions from an enemy to her blood. But all such mundane arrangements Fate laughs to scorn in her own good time, and so it came about that after years and years of open warfare a Skidmore loved a Buckley. He was a hardheaded, hardfisted fellow, young Pete Skidmore.

And Rosie Buckley was like a wild flower of her native heath. He saw her first at a dance on Big Goose creek. It was a Buckley dance, and a Skidmore hadn't any business to be within miles of the place, but with characteristic deviltry Pete had fared over the intervening spur to have a look at the festivities. Skulking in the shadows at a safe distance, he watched the scene, and he saw that the life of it was one buxom, red-cheeked lass, with black-braided hair and a merry laugh always on her lips. Before he left he heard some one call her name, so he knew who she was.

Not many days later he chanced to see her alone, and his heart warmed with longing. He had swung down a ravine early one morning with a string of squirrels in his hand and his gun over his shoulder and so on to the dirt road leading to the nearest town. Directly before him was Rose Buckley, riding by herself to market. She had not seen him, and he stepped back to the side of the road. She came jogging on, singing as she came. Ten feet away she raised her head and their eyes met. She stopped singing, but rode on bravely, eyeing him coldly all the time. When she was opposite him Pete smiled and bowed, and when he saw the quick blood mount up to her face his heart exulted. After she was gone he stood a long time without moving, looking at the trail her horse's feet had left in the dust.

He came upon her in the burying ground of her people a few days later. He risked a greeting, flushing as he spoke the simple words. She barely nodded, then rode slowly away from him toward the western spur, whither he dared not follow. He hovered about the spot thereafter, lonely and desolate though it was, and one afternoon she came again, blithe and happy. Pete, screened by some bushes, waited until she had slipped from her horse and had made her way through the weeds and matted grass to one of the newest graves in the place, then, as she stooped to place some wild flowers upon it, he came and stood quite near.

"Evenin'," he said pleasantly.

The girl stood upright and trembled violently, with a scared look on her face.

"You—you're a Skidmore!" she answered, but there was more of fright than revulsion in her voice.

"I'm Peter Skidmore. Your name's Rosie, ain't it? I seen yo' at the dance on Big Goose."

"How—why —"

"Oh, I 'uz aroun'. I come to see what 'uz goin' on. I'm not 'feered uv any man!"

She looked at him and believed it to be true.

"You mustn't talk to me," she faltered. "I'm a Buckley."

"I know yo' air, but love don't take no 'count uv sich things. Come, an' le's talk it over, Rosie. They's no use bein' foolish."

He was standing close by the grave then, and he stretched his hand out over it as he spoke.

"It's foolish to keep on killin' each other," he said earnestly. "Le's you an' me marry, and put a stop to it all!"

She looked in a desperate way at his strong frame, and his steady eyes caught her and held them.

"Come, Rosie," he said again pleadingly.

She gave a shivering sigh, then put her hand in his across the low mound which one of his house had caused to be made.

"THROUGH THE MOONLIGHT RODE THE QUEER PAIR, STIRRUP TO STIRRUP, NEVER SPEAKING."

"I can't! I can't!" She said, but all the time he was gently but forcibly drawing her toward him.

Her feet passed over the line marked by the fresh earth between them, and she stood beside him.

"S'pose any uv em'd see!" she moaned, "S'pose dad 'd see; he'd shoot me!"

"Don't be 'feered, Rosie," said Pete, soothingly; "thar's nobody to see, 'n' if thar wuz"—he drew forward the rifle which he had been holding behind his back with his left hand. "I c'n cut a turkey's head off at a hund'ed yards!"

"Don't!" she said, with a gesture of protest. "I'm so tired uv livin' this way."

He led her silently to an uncouth stone sarcophagus which the whim of some Buckley had caused to be reared over the bones of a slain ancestor. Drawing her down beside him upon this, he leaned his rifle against the crude stones and faced her again.

"I loved ye that night when I seen ye on Big Goose," he said, holding her gaze by the sheer mastery of his will. "'n' I want ye to marry me, 'n' help stop all this bloodshed. Thar's no use in it, 'n' people c'n jist as well live peaceable."

"Dad'll never let me come back," she whispered; "yo' don't know Long Jake!" A vision of his own stern sire flashed across Pete's mind, but he persevered doggedly.

"'N' ef they won't, won't we be enough fur each other? But soon or late, they'll come 'roun.' Will ye go with me?"

With sudden fierceness he gripped her hands and leaned toward her.

"Where, Pete?" she asked, bewildered.

"Away, fust! Then we'll come back, 'n' ef they won't take us in thar's the middle toe uv Crowfoot, 'n' nobody c'n keep us from buildin' a house 'n' livin' thar. Rosie, won't ye come?"

"When?—N' not say goodby?"

"They'd lock ye up till some o' yo' people killed me. Now, Rosie; now! My hoss 's out yonder, 'n' he's big 'n' strong. Won't ye trust me, Rosie, gal?"

"Y—yes!" she sobbed, and fell forward, trembling, upon his breast.

All that night over the yellow mountain road a big horse traveled with a double burden. Morning found the fugitives in a small town, and by noon they were wed.

Then the foolhardy nature of Pete asserted itself again. Leaving his wife safe in another part of the mountains, he rode with one other companion—a stranger to the parts—back to Crowfoot, up to the crest of the central spur which no one owned. There he waited while he sent his friend on an embassy to his father. Wild Bill, telling him he wanted to bring his wife there and live with him, as he had always done. The old man's answer—"I'll see him in hell fust!" Then the messenger went westward, bearing word to Long Jake Buckley that Pete and his wife would like to come and live with them. Long Jake said:

"I'll kill 'im, damn 'im, the fust time I see 'im!" When these respective replies had been received, Pete, not at all astonished nor disconcerted, began the erection of a cabin on the neutral spur of Crowfoot. He didn't intend that any one should drive him from the spot where he was born and raised. When the humble shelter was finished he brought Rosie to it, and there they began their life of loneliness.

This act of the two young people, instead of placating hardened consciences, seemed but to embitter the more the hearts of the outraged families. They lived and moved upon their respective preserves, and the lone cabin upon the central spur never had a visitor. Its inmates were let alone; that was all they could ask. Were they in want? No one knew. Were they sick? No one cared.

It was at this stage of affairs that a wandering preacher came among the Skidmores one day. He had heard of the recent marriage; he came to see if he could not employ it to bring about a reconciliation between the two factions. The Skidmores grew angry and would not listen. But the preacher was a determined man. He got them together one evening and fired the straight gospel at them from a stump in the yard. He did not spare invective, and he did not say Hades when he meant Hell. He did not broach the forbidden subject, but he talked all around it, and sometimes he brushed against it. Wild Bill sat on a chair beside his door with his tribe around him, and he took it all in. The language he listened to was plain; he understood it.

The next day the preacher moved over to the Buckleys, and there his special subject was again tabooed. But that night the Buckley's came, big and little, to listen to him, and after the talk was over Long Jake wondered to himself if what the fellow said was true. The preacher went to the lonely cabin. Pete and Rosie were willing and waiting for a friendly move. The preacher told them to grasp every chance for making up the fuss; that he had sown good seed and he hoped the fruit would come in time. Then he sought other fields.

In the rugged bosoms of each of the feudist patriarchs strange thoughts were struggling into form. "Kill or be killed," had been their motto for years. "Forgive or be damned," was a new creed, and a startling one. The clan wondered what had come over Wild Bill. He seemed never at ease and was restless and afraid; he of all men! The Buckleys looked at Long Jake in wonder as he sat day in and day out, with his chin sunk in thought.

Winter passed and spring blossomed upon the hills. Like the flags of a conquering army the trees shook out their green banners, and the birds sang in the thickets. Then summer came and the wild grapes ripened in their tangled coverts. In the little cabin on the central spur Rosie's hour had come. She lay upon her rude pallet, her face stamped with an undefinable terror. The holy mystery of motherhood confronted her. Pete was there, silent, helpless. An old woman and a little girl were in the room. The woman lived in a miserable hut at the base of the mountain, with her grandchild, and sided with neither faction. Pete had prevailed upon her to come. With the rising of the moon a boy was born. The mother lay very still.

"Pete," she said, after a long time, "send fur 'em—your dad, my dad."

The man was dumb; he could not leave her. He swept her eyes around helplessly. The 10-year-old girl understood, and came forward.

"I'll go," she said, "to Long Jake's fust, 'cause it's the closest. Then him an' me c'n ride. I'm not 'feered."

She slipped out into the night.

Long Jake listened to the story, jerked out in gasps, for the child had run most of the way. He thought for a few minutes, then went and saddled his horse, took the child up behind him and rode off. Half way to the Skidmores he stopped, dismounted, spoke briefly to his companion, then sat down on the roots of a tree to wait, with his head in his hands. The elfin figure, astride the big horse sped on alone. Wild Bill blinked and stared at the tale he heard.

"He's waitin' fur ye at the ben' in Possum Holler," the girl concluded, "an' he ain't got nary weepon. 'N' it's a boy!"

Two men rode down a rock gorge one summer night, stirrup to stirrup. There were no signs of weapons upon either, and they said never a word. A child rode behind one, holding with both hands to his coarse shirt. After a while the horsemen debouched into a small open, then trailed diagonally up the side of the neutral spur. Before the lonely cabin upon its top they drew rein, swung themselves to earth, and hitched to different limbs of the same tree. Long Jake reached the door first—it was his daughter. Wild Bill and the little messenger followed closely behind, and they all went in. The tallow candle on the shelf above the cot guttered and shed a yellow, unnatural light around. No one had thought to snuff it. Wild Bill walked over and with his horny finger and thumb pinched off the charred wick. The candle blazed up afresh. With the heavy tread of boots on the oaken floor the young mother opened her eyes wearily. She saw her father standing at her feet, wordless; a little distance away was the ancient enemy of her house.

"Dad," she said, in a faint voice, "come 'ere."

She raised her right hand and beckoned feebly. The giant figure obeyed, but still stood, awed, and not knowing what to do.

"Pete's dad! I want Pete's dad, too!" moaned Rosie, with the querulous wail of a child.

Wild Bill moved to her other side.

"I'm here, gal!" he said, but through the gruffness in his voice ran a strain of pity.

The sufferer looked up, and a smile came to her face.

"You—Wild Bill Skidmore—an' you dad—it's time to quit killin'. The blood's the same now—here's the fust!" She placed her hand on a little knot in the bed clothes near her breast. "His blood is your'n, dad, an' his blood is your'n, Wild Bill. I'm goin' to die, I'm feered, but yo' mus' make up fust, fur the sake uv the boy!"

She stopped, with Pete's shaggy head bent low over the hand he held.

Slowly her free hand wandered back to the knot in the bed clothes again.

"We'll call 'im Buckley Skidmore," she said.

"'N' we'll lay down the gun from this night!" spoke Long Jake, thrusting out a big, hairy hand.

Wild Bill took it.

"So help us God!" he said.

TWENTY YEARS OF TROLLEY TRIPPING

"Broomstick Car" First Appeared Just Two Decades Ago Now It Is Omnipresent, Is an Important Factor in Transportation, and Has Opened a Vast Field for Investment To Do All a Year's Electric Riding for Americans One Man Must Travel 150,000 Miles an Hour, Day and Night, Without Stops Whole World Benefits by Our Ingenuity and Enterprise

BOSTON, May 23, 1908.—Twenty years ago this spring a Boston street railway manager went to Richmond, Va., to inspect the newly opened trolley line. There he saw 22 motormen, one after the other, start their cars from the car barn and go buzzing up hill and down through the city streets. The spectacle was something new in street railroading.

The Richmond line, the first practical application on any scale of the principle of the overhead trolley, had been in operation since February 11, 1888. Of its success there was no question. The Bostonian went home to take immediate steps for the installation of a trolley system on one of the lines leading outward from the Hub. Boston was thus the first very large city of the United States to begin to electrify its street car service. Since then in the brief space of two decades there have been built in this country alone trolley roads which carry more than five billion passengers annually.

If one person had to do all the trolley tripping for all his fellow Americans he would travel in a straight line more than fifty thousand times around the earth. In order to finish his task in a single year he would have to go day and night at a rate of about 150,000 miles an hour—say 1,000 times as fast as the human voice is carried through the air. At the present rate of growth of the industry he would be obliged a few years hence to exceed the velocity with which the light leaps from sun to planet.

All this in twenty years. The modern world moves fast. Men who would attend Dr. Osler's chloroforming were students at Harvard University a little less than two decades ago when the plush seated vehicles remodeled from horse cars and provided with motors and controllers, began to zip to the [illegible] overhead wire along Main street into Bowdoin Square, Boston. That and one other were the only electric lines in the country beside the one at Richmond. Today the student in any of the New England universities can [illegible] by trolley far into the middle [illegible] or to a considerable distance [illegible]ward or southward, along the [illegible] been retired. Because of the inconvenience of animal power as a motive street car managers everywhere a few years ago were eagerly watching the outcome of experiments with electric traction. For years they had kept watch on the pioneer efforts; Thomas Davenport's little circular toy railroad shown at Springfield, Mass., in 1835; Professor Moses G. Farmer's car propelled from a nitric acid battery in 1847; Thomas Hall's toy motor car on a 40-foot track, the marvel of visitors at Charitable Mechanic's Fair at Boston, 1857, Professor C. G. Page's trial motor car run over the Washington and Baltimore railroad line in 1879; the trial motor cars experimented upon by the wizard of Menlo Park in the early eighties; Leo Daft's experimental roads exhibited at Coney Island and Mechanic's Institute Fair at Boston in 1884; Chas. J. Van Depoele's demonstration line at the New Orleans Exposition of 1885; John C. Henry's Kansas City-Independence line, first exemplifying the overhead wire system with a rod which the management of the road called a troller, but which the employes called the trolley, fixing the name of the system for all time. When finally Frank J. Sprague's line at Richmond was declared successful practical men all over the country were eager to make the change as soon as possible.

To help them do this it happened that within a very few years after the first successful operation at Richmond a great deal of money became available for what appeared certain to become a profitable form of investment. The steam railroads in the early nineties seemed to have been pretty well constructed. Many of them were no longer so profitable as a few decades before. Particularly in New England, where so many of the great continental lines were projected, and to an extent elsewhere, owners of railway stocks were [illegible] and to reinvest in electrical enterprises. Telephone securities appealed to many, with the result that today, as President Vail has recently shown, more than three-fourths of the share capital of the parent company of the Bell system is held in New England.

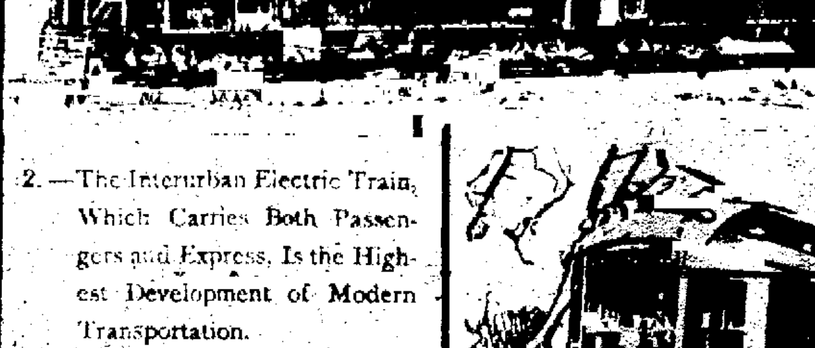

Many others, particularly during the dull times about [illegible] and [illegible], put capital, for which there were but small dividends in the established industrial enterprises, into trolley projects. Electric street car systems were installed in [illegible] were several little electric traction companies in a city; later came such consolidations in the direction of efficiency as the Boston Elevated Railway company, the Detroit United Railway company, the New Orleans Railways company, the United Railways and Electric company of Baltimore and many others. Toward the end of the nineties came the beginning of the great interurban systems of the middle west, one of the most prominent promoted by a New England interest which has since come to grief, but most of them successfully and conservatively financed. The whole country had awakened to a perception that the trolley was going further. Figures told a remarkable growth. Some 8,000 miles of track in 1890 had expanded to nearly 23,000 in 1902. The number of fare passengers more than doubled in 12 years. The number of employes became an army twice the size of the standing army of the United States.

The Progress of Twenty Years.

1.—The Old-Time Horse Car, Now a Relic of the Dark Ages, is Falling into Decay in the Back Lots.

2.—The Interurban Electric Train, Which Carries Both Passengers and Express, Is the Highest Development of Modern Transportation.

3.—The "Semi-Convertible" Car, with Air Brakes, Folding Steps and Inclosed Platform, the Last Word in City Street Car Service, Is a Closed Vehicle in Winter and an Open One [illegible]

The time came early when not only the largest cities and their suburbs were seen to offer a field for electrical equipment but places of from twenty to two hundred thousand as well. Capital from the eastern money markets was on the lookout for investment in traction enterprises in promising cities of the west and south. With astonishing rapidity the slow moving "hayburners," as the mule cars were called in southern places, were retired in favor of modern electric conveyances. Such cities as Savannah, Columbus, Dallas, Houston, Tampa, Birmingham, Knoxville, Jacksonville, Key West, El Paso and many more were given modern transportation, usually by co-operation of local and eastern capital. The New Englander is traditionally a close student of the growth of the country; wherever it has seemed to him that an important city is in process of upbuilding there he has invested his savings. Investors in other sections have frequently got the benefit of his shrewd guesses.

This movement, still going on, has become tremendous considering that it is only twenty years from the very beginning of the trolley system and hardly fifteen years since the principles of scientific equipment of electric systems in growing cities were developed. Hundreds of millions of the savings of thrifty eastern people have been expended on transportation systems of the United States, Canada and the island dependencies. The glaciers of Mount Rainier have been harnessed, the resources of the nation's "white coal" brought into usefulness. It was not long since that an official trained in the Boston Elevated Railway company was called to Manila to install a thoroughly modern street car system in the Philippine capital. Although the electric car service is only twenty years old, American enterprise has had it running for about a third of that time in Americanized Porto Rico. The business depression of the past few months has in some respects stimulated further trolley building, particularly in communities which have not already been provided with the facilities.

The vehicles themselves on which everyday Americans this spring and summer travel to their Dreamland or [illegible] improved. For the first electric lines in Richmond and Boston horse cars were slightly remodeled. These were practically the little abbreviated boxes with shabby upholsterings that jogged through the streets of all American cities. For summer use the managers of the new electric lines took the ordinary open cars, invented in Boston, the cradle seat being a device of J. E. Rugg, now an official of the Boston Elevated company. Many of the improvements on elevated railroad cars, first adopted in Boston, such as the "easy access" doors worked by power, have been applied to the more expensive type of trolley cars. This means particularly the "semi-convertibles." This is the type of car that seems destined to be universally used in the larger centers of population. As late as the St. Louis Exposition of 1904, the great commodious and comfortable "semi-convertibles" which transported the crowds to and from the fair were more or less of a novelty to the public, although street car managements had for years been advocating something of the kind as a means of avoiding investment in a double set of cars.

Just what the popular attitude would be toward them was unknown, but hundreds of thousands of Americans who visited the Louisiana Purchase Exposition liked the semi-convertibles. They have since then gained in popularity so that the summer of 1908 finds them in use on many of best equipped transportation lines of the country. Particularly in such a climate as that of New England where warmth and cold, sunshine and rain, succeed each other almost without warning, such a corporation as the Boston Elevated company has found that they have solved many of the difficulties of operation. The various safety devices and conveniences with which they are provided, as compared with the crude vehicles that were being installed 20 years ago, demonstrated how rapid progress has been.

In intensive railroading, with better co-operation of railroads and trolley systems, is believed to lie the future of electric transportation in the big centers of population. Experiments in the way of electrification on the New Haven and other railroad systems are in that direction. The next ten years of the trolley will probably also see a continuation of the present policy of financial leaders and engineering [illegible]

WHEN THE WEST WAS BORN AGAIN

Today the Thirty-Ninth Anniversary of the Completion of the First Pacific Railroad A Crude Affair Compared With the Latest Enterprise Marvelous Construction of the New Western Pacific Line How the Great Empire of the Prairies and Mountains Has Come Into Its Own

SALT LAKE CITY, May 20, 1908.—Tomorrow is the thirty-ninth anniversary of the greatest commercial event in the history of this country. On the tenth of May, 1869, the last spikes were driven in the first railroad to link the great West commercially with the rest of the United States.

Things were very different from what they are now on that May day thirty-nine years ago, though the entire country, which so long had held aloof from the Pacific railroad projects, seemed to awaken at last and realize the meaning of the ceremony which was being performed at the little railroad town at Promontory, in Utah, 6.5 miles east of Sacramento. Few people gathered to witness the event, compared to the number that had attended the far more imposing exercises when ground was broken in Omaha, in 1863. But the whole nation gave ear, as it were, to the sound of the hammer strokes that drove home the last spikes and for the first time brought into close commercial contact the great producing region of the West and the consuming centers of the East.

All the principal offices of the country were connected by telegraph with the now forgotten town of Promontory on that day, and the click of the instrument communicated to waiting thousands the resounding blows that completed the last section in the steel highway between ocean and ocean. The governor of California had come to attend the ceremonies, ... from the other side of the Rockies there was the ... representation. The last tie to which the rails were spiked was made of highly polished California laurel and bore a silver plate with the inscription:

The Last Tie
Laid in the Completion of the Pacific Railroad, May 10, 1869.

Into this were driven four spikes, two of silver and two of gold, and when they were fast and firm the great bond between the Atlantic and the Pacific was welded.

"Hats off. ... [illegible] clicked by the telegraph instruments to the East. And then, after the invocation by the Reverend Dr. Todd of Pittsfield, the wire spread the word: "We have got done praying." Back came the answer, "We understand; all are ready in the East."

With that simple ceremony was completed the tremendous achievement of which Sidney Dillon, president of the Credit Mobelier—the company which constructed the Union Pacific—declared many years afterwards: "It is not too much to say that the opening of the Pacific [illegible] was an event to be ranked in far-reaching results with the landing of the Pilgrims or perhaps the voyage of Columbus."

The old West has practically vanished and with it many of the things that made the story of the building of the first Pacific railroad read almost like a fantastic romance. In the first quarter-century after its completion the Union Pacific accomplished results which have influenced the whole world to a striking degree. But today the work of that period seems crude and almost careless. No better way of understanding the difference between what has been and what is of measuring America's wonderful progress in ... two generations, can be found than by comparing the first line to the coast—the Union Pacific—and the latest—the Western Pacific.

When the first Pacific line was built the engineers ran the tracks around a boulder rather than move it, and even gave way to the largest trees. Though an authority writes that the constructors of the Union Pacific builded better than they knew, it has taken the constructive genius of a Harriman and at least a hundred million dollars to rebuild the road and make it an efficient transportation system judged by modern standards. But not even mountains could turn the Western Pacific engineers aside. In the early days it was "get there somehow;" today it is "get there wisely."

The instructions given the engineers of the Western Pacific were simple and direct: "You are to build a straight road ... [illegible] grade of one per cent." Thirty-nine years ago that mandate would have spelled impossibility; today it is an accomplished fact. Indeed, on the older Pacific roads grades were as nature made them; but the Western Pacific has been built in an almost unbelievable way which gives it, on 90 per cent of its mileage from Salt Lake City to San Francisco, a maximum grade of four-tenths of one per cent, or a fraction over 21 feet to the mile. In other words, this road through the most mountainous region of the country has been so constructed that its locomotives will have a hauling power equal to that of engines on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, whose line traverses the level East. On the Union Pacific in early days the grades increased the operating expenses 300 per cent.; contrarywise, the lack of grades on the Western Pacific means saving just that much in cost of operation.

There is one respect in which this newest road which is going down from Salt Lake to San Francisco has ... [illegible] about its planning or construction; indeed, in its fruition it has been slower, though far safer, than were the earlier lines. The Western Pacific was born in the brain of E. T. Jeffery, who closely followed General Palmer as president of the Denver and Rio Grande, and it has been brought to completion by him. Mr. Jeffery has been in the railroad business 50 years and this youngest child of his imagination is more than 15 years old, though active work of construction has not been going on all that time. As soon as he succeeded to the presidency of the Rio Grande in 1891, Mr. Jeffery sensed the need of an outlet to the Pacific coast. The pioneers in Pacific railroading took no account of local freight, but as experience has proved that this class of traffic makes up 85 per cent of the total, the new enterprise, instead of building to reach the coast somehow, anyhow, was designed with consideration for all the commercial factors, to the end that it might get the most carrying business, open up the most promising territory, and thus earn the largest dividends.

There, in a word, is the greatest difference between the early roads and the latest. Two generations ago the west was regarded merely as a gap to be bridged in order to secure the supposed Oriental trade. Today the trade with the orient is an almost negligible factor compared with the importance of providing for local traffic and developing new territory. In 1869 the west was nothing from the traffic manager's point of view, in 1908 it is everything; and the change has been marked by the growth simultaneously of the railroads and the country through which they pass. But the most striking difference between the methods employed in putting through the early Pacific roads and those used today appears on the financial side. Thirty-nine years ago the idea was simply to build a railroad; today it is to build a profitable railroad, a railroad that will at the same time ... [illegible] transportation facilities that will make it profitable and an opportunity for secure investment.

The Union Pacific required for its construction tremendous government subsidies. Sometimes these took the form of millions of acres of land, sometimes of cash additions in the shape of bonds. In certain cases the subsidies aggregated $48,000 a mile, and never did they fall ... [illegible] but it has actually paid the government for timber cut on the land along its right-of-way which the government laid claim to. With a population that has grown to 30,000,000 from the two millions of people it had when the Union Pacific was built, the west realized its own gigantic possibilities and welcomes another railroad. Whereas moneyed men ridiculed what they regarded as a visionary scheme and refused to invest it in the Union Pacific, so that it was almost impossible for the promoters of that great enterprise to secure capital, some of these same scoffers hastened to give their support to the present undertaking. The entire bond issue of the Western Pacific, amounting in round figures to $50,000,000, was subscribed before a spadeful of earth was turned on the right-of-way.

Two-thirds of the way through the last century the west was a desert; now it is the great producer of freight. Then its railroads were built as a daring gambel; now they are constructed as an assured investment from the start. Then the one per cent grade was an impossibility; now it is a characteristically twentieth century money maker—so expensive in the beginning that it would have frightened the previous generation, but so certain in result that it makes a strong appeal to this one.

A SUNDAY MORNING DANIEL

Came Between the Grass Widow and the Three-Time Murderers With Solemn Justice.

From the New York Sun.

Mrs. Mary Shepper and Annie McCarthy answered to their names yesterday morning in the West Side court, and after they had mounted the bridge from opposite sides stood glaring at each other until Magistrate Steinert looked up and asked what he could do for them.

"That one," said Mrs. Shepper, pointing to Annie McCarthy, "called me a three-time murderer, and I want her to prove it."

"Why, my dear madam, if she proved anything like that, even a third of that, it would get you in more trouble than you ever had in all your life," said the magistrate.

"Well, I am not a murderer even once and she has insulted me," retorted Mrs. Shepper. "I can't help it if I have been married three times and am still young. My other two husbands died decent deaths without a breath of suspicion, and she has no right to say that I killed the three of them when the third isn't even dead already."

The magistrate looked askance at Annie. McCarthy smiled, and Mrs. Shepper's face took on an anxious expression of the marksman who, having fired, is awaiting a signal from the rifle pit, not knowing whether he has made a bull's-eye or a miss.

"Did you say that she was a three-time murderer?" the magistrate finally asked in tones so grave that the smile left the face of the McCarthy woman.

Falteringly, she answered: "I did, your honor, but she provoked me. She ... [illegible] well together, that is no reason why she should call me such a name."

"Indeed it is not," remarked the magistrate. "It was very, very wrong."

"She doesn't like me because her stepdaughter does," continued the young woman, "and she thinks she can say what she pleases, but I am a lady, not a grass widow."

Mrs. Shepper remarked that the ladies of her acquaintance did not wear as good clothes as those of her enemy, and she could not understand how a lady could wear such things and not work if she were not a grass widow of the greenest hue.

"But, madam, you don't know anything against this young woman's character, do you?" asked the magistrate.

"Only that she dresses so well," replied Mrs. Shepper.

"And could you go to the district attorney and furnish him with evidence to convict this woman of killing her husbands?" asked the judge of Annie.

"All I know about her is that she has been married three times. For the life of me I can't see how she ever managed to catch one man, unless she doped him," was the reply.

"You didn't hold the one you had, so far as I can see," sneered Mrs. Shepper.

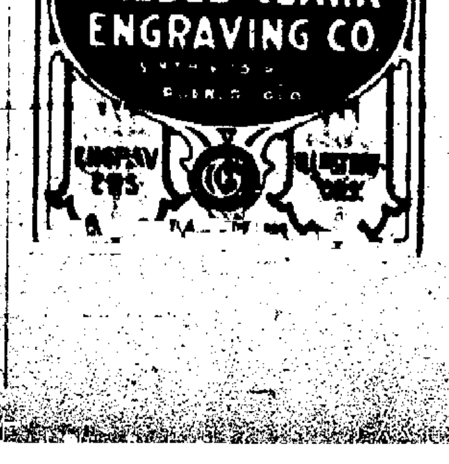

"At that I don't have to divide my time between two different cemeteries and a four-room flat. Perhaps you didn't kill any one of your husbands, but I will bet that the two dead are happier than the one alive, and I guess he wouldn't kick at a little cyanide in his coffee."

"Still, I don't wear better clothes than any woman in the neighborhood."

"Come, come," said the magistrate, "this can't go on all day. You women have got to keep the peace, and to insure that I will hold you each in $300 bond."

"But she mustn't be so friendly with my stepdaughter."

"If she wasn't any nicer than you I wouldn't let her in my house," was the last retort, and then the bonds were arranged.

When the Honeymoon days are over, what is more natural for the prudent young couple than to think of their own home? A mated man and woman yearn for the seclusion of their own fireside and their own home. Boarding, living with parents, or dwelling in a rented flat or house is all right when it is preparatory to getting one's own home. No matter how humble, no matter how small, there is a fascination about ownership.

And then there is the other side to be thought of. Ownership is cheaper than paying rent. Through building associations and the accommodation of banks it is possible for people to buy homes and pay very little more than rent.

Every day in the columns of THE GAZETTE are advertised places where young people may go, where they may, figuratively speaking, pitch their tent, dwell in happiness, and become taxpayers and citizens of their city.

Gazette Want Ads. Results

Housewives Sell Old Furniture

The women who have learned to read "Want Ads." appreciate what these little ads. do for the household. When you have an old style bookcase or table that is now too small for your growing family, you can sell them through the Want Ads. Read these little Want Ads. every day—sooner or later you will find somebody who wants just the kind of a bokcase or table you no longer have any need for. The money you can get from the sale will help considerably in buying new articles for your home.
If you do not find an ad. of somebody who wants what you have for sale, then write a small ad. describing the articles which you want to sell and insert the ad. in The Gazette, either Daily or Sunday —it will cost you only a few cents. It is almost certain that you will find somebody in this way who will make a bargain with you.

Our Guaranteed "Lost Ads"

Think of it---we guarantee to secure return of any lost article or no pay.
Give us a description of the article, any particulars, etc.; if we return it, pay the usual rate for the advertisement; if it is not returned, pay NOTHING.

THE WRONG MR. LEWIS

From the New York Globe.

"The number of people who do not realize the size of the average New York hotel is surprising," said the clerk of one of the largest hotels in the Tenderloin section of the city. "The result is that there is often a mix-up in messages when there is really no need for it. For instance, yesterday a young woman called for Mr. Lewis. She was told that he was not in. A few moments later Mr. Lewis came in, and was told to call up the young woman's number. Then he discovered that there was another Mr. Lewis in the house—or had been—who was here only for a day or so, and the telephone operator had not known the fact and naturally supposed the particular Mr. Lewis wanted was the Mr. Lewis who was a regular patron of the house.

"Now, if that young woman had only given the first name of her Mr. Lewis there would have been no trouble, but [illegible]

THE KILLING OF MANUEL CHAVEZ

Sensational Hold-up and Murder of Rich Mexican Trader of Pioneer Days

From The Kansas City Star.

HERE and there on the broad Kansas prairies a few scars in the soil, a few stretches of worn hollows and ruts, yet remain to mark the course of the Santa Fe trail. For the rest it lives only in the history of those stirring days and in the memories of a few old men.

In the '40s Westport Landing on the Missouri was the outpost of the civilization that was pushing out from the east, as Santa Fe was the outpost of that which was pushing up from Mexico. The Santa Fe trail was the link which bound these two outposts together, and over this highway passed the commerce of all the great territory of this commerce that is bound up the adventure and romance, the tales of fortunes made and lost, of deeds of blood and daring, of rivalries, feuds, hardships, of heroism and endurance as well as of robbery and murder, that are associated in the minds of all who have read of those days.

For one of the darkest of these deeds the annals of Westport and the old Yocum boarding house that stood for years at the corner of Spring street and Westport avenue furnish the history and the setting. Murder and buried treasure figure in a plot, the story of which has come down in the history of the Santa Fe trail under the various names of "The Yocum House Plot," "The Treasure of Crow Creek" and "The Murder of Manuel Chavez."

Revenge a Motive.

Manuel Chavez was a wealthy Mexican trader. His wagon trains, piled with rich merchandise, made regular trips between Westport and his store at Santa Fe, carrying down manufactured goods from the east and bringing back cotton and tobacco and other products that were forwarded from the Mexican border. The fame of Chavez's wealth had traveled the length of the trail. His stout wagons, drawn by 20 mules or as many oxen, were familiar sights at Westport landing, and many eyes had rested enviously upon the oaken strong box in which the trader carried his Mexican silver and American gold. Every trader was his own banker on the trail and bought and paid for his goods in hard money.

How long the plot to rob Chavez had been hatching, or whether, indeed, the Mexican's money was the sole object of the conspiracy, are points that were never fully established. Revenge, as much as cupidity, may have played a part. Chavez had made himself unpopular on the trail by adding the profits of teaming to those of buying and selling goods. Many carriers with inferior equipments found that the rich Mexican with his great mule teams that could make the trip to Santa Fe in 35 days, as against the 40 days or more required by oxen, was slowly monopolizing the carrying business of the trail. And it is probable that this had something to do with the plans that were laid to kill him in the spring of 1846.

That the plot was hatched in the Yokum house was proved by events which followed, but the identity of all the men concerned in it never was fully established. That Yocum himself was one of the moving spirits in the enterprise was believed by many. It is certain, however, that he did not go on the expedition, though he afterward made a trip to the scene of the murder to secure the treasure which the conspirators had been unable to get away with, and was arrested after he had found it.

The Treasure Hunt.

There were at least 15 men in the party that set out on the murderous enterprise. Their plans were carefully laid. They left Westport by ones and twos and at intervals of two or three days, and met at a point many miles away on the trail. They had timed the coming of the Mexican so as to meet him at Cow Creek station, one of the regular stopping places for wagon trains, about 240 miles southwest of Westport, in Rice county, Kansas. Chavez arrived at Cow Creek at the expected time and went into camp, as was his custom, about four miles from the station on a small "branch," since called Chavez Creek. From the place selected by the murderers and the nature of the attack, it is probable that they hoped the raid would be attributed to the Indians. At any rate, a sudden descent was made in the night, the horses stampeded and Chavez shot dead as he sprang to the defense of his wagon. Whether the hiding of the booty at the place of the attack was part of the preconcerted plan, or whether the necessity arose later, is not known, but when the murderers galloped away they left $35,000 in specie buried in the earth only a short distance from the plundered wagon.

The news of the murder quickly reached Westport and stirred the town as it had never been stirred before, and as it was not to be stirred again until the rumor of the gold discovery in California reached it three years later. In some mysterious way it became known that the bandits had failed to get away with the money and that it had been buried at the scene of the attack. From that moment Westport became treasure mad. Every inhabitant of the town was either laying plans to capture the murderers or planning an expedition to find the murdered man's specie box.

The Capture of Robbers.

There are a few men still living in Kansas City who remember the Chavez murder and the treasure hunt that followed it. One of these is Joseph Chick. Mr. Chick was a small boy, just big enough, he says, to sit on a horse, when the murder was committed. "I had a part myself in the capture of two of the men connected with the murder," he relates. "When the news [illegible] to the landing with a note to 'Cal' McCoy. McCoy was Westport's leading citizen and laid the town out with a grapevine, it is said. He was waiting at the landing for a boat to come down the river and was greatly excited when he read my father's note. Telling me to wait, he jumped on my horse and galloped back to town. When he came back the boat was just making the landing. McCoy jumped on her before she touched the shore and rushed to the other side, just as two [illegible] volvers and ordered them back. After some parley they obeyed, and as soon as they stepped on the landing they were seized and bound. I don't know how my father and McCoy figured it out, but these were two of the men concerned in the killing of Chavez and were making their escape down the river."

From the first suspicion was directed toward Yocum and a number of gamblers who frequented his place, but no move was made at first to arrest them, though a close watch was kept upon their movements. This vigilance finally was rewarded. Yocum, accompanied by a Dr. Prefontaine, who lived in the house, were seen to set off one morning and take the trail to the west. They were allowed to go, but a posse immediately followed.

Finding the Treasure.

In the meantime others had been busy planning treasure quest expeditions, but it was no easy matter to slip out of town unobserved. Every man was suspicious of his neighbor, and a sort of quarantine was established to prevent anyone getting away.

"One man got away," relates Mr. Chick, "but he didn't get far. Ed Peyton was his name. He worked in Colonel 'Jim' Hunter's harness shop. One morning Ed. was missing, and Colonel Jim suspected right away where he had gone. Colonel Jim buckled on his gun, mounted his horse and started after him. Ed. knew who was following him, and when they got to close quarters he tied up his horse and hid in a plum thicket. Colonel Jim circled 'round and 'round, trying to get a sight of him, but couldn't. Finally he pulled his gun and sung out, 'Well, I reckon you better come out, Ed.' and Ed. came."

The posse that followed Yocum and Prefontaine kept out of sight until the two men had located the buried money and then closed in on them. They were arrested as they were loading the money on their horses. They made no resistance, and asserted that it had been their purpose to turn the specie over to the authorities and claim a reward.

When the posse returned with the two prisoners and the money, all of Westport turned out and escorted it into town. It was the culmination of the greatest sensation in the history of the place. The excitement continued throughout the hunting down and trials of the plotters, which continued for months. At least 15 prosecutions were brought. Two or three of the guilty were hanged and several were given long terms in prison. Despite the plausible plea made by Prefontaine that the finding of the money was by chance and that he had intended to give it up, his knowledge of its whereabouts convicted him as an accessory and he received a prison term. Yocum could not be connected with the crime and he escaped punishment.

ACTIVITY IS PLANNED

OURAY PROPERTIES TAKE ON NEW LIFE.

Big Operations Will Be Inaugurated Gold Lion and Joker to the Front.

OURAY, Colo., May 23.—The Salisbury mine in the Uncompahgre district, one of the best undeveloped properties in the San Juan country, is soon to be taken over by T. D. Fraser of Des Moines and Frank W. Peck of Minneapolis. These parties, both of whom are experienced mining men of Nevada, went over the property recently and it is understood that they will assume control in a short time. Development work will begin at once and it will be among the late shippers of 1908.

George Crawford of the Gold Lion Ouray in a few days and will at once make arrangements for the opening up of all the claims in the group which his syndicate controls. Ore is already being taken from the upper workings of the Gold Lion and three months' development work will place the mine in such shape that the lower workings will be shipping as well.

A 17-horsepower gasoline hoist has been sent up to the Pueblo lode in the Beaver and Belfast group and everything is in readiness to sink a 200-foot shaft to a vein which is known to traverse the claim. The Pueblo is already a steady shipper and is one of the most productive claims in this important group.

Since last May the Camp Bird has been forced to forego all operations on one of the levels in its property on account of an excessive flow of water. A 50-gallon pump which they have been using for some time merely kept the water at a certain pressure. A short time ago an order was placed for a 1,000-gallon turbine pump, and this has arrived and as soon as the road between the mine and mill opens up it will be placed on the flooded level, and in a short time the water which has caused so much annoyance will be disposed of. Active work will commence on the level as soon as the water is under control.

An important strike has been made in the Alexandria mine, which is one of the Crawford syndicate group of claims, located about one-half mile east of the Yankee Girl on Red Mountain No. 2. The Alexandria has been worked since last summer under lease of Lonergan, Stratton and Davy, who made several shipments last season of good grade lead-silver ore. They broke into two and a half feet of 10 per cent lead-copper ore which promises to show good silver and gold values. From development at various points adjacent to the new strike it is believed that a large ore body has been discovered and that a big tonnage producer will be the result of the development.

ORE RUNS $100 TO TON

LITTLE CLARA IS STILL A HEAVY PRODUCER.

Johnson Is Securing Good Returns from Middle Block of Burns of Acacia Co.—Portland Strike.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., May 23.—Messrs. Thompson and Humphreys, who are leasing on the Little Clara claim of the Work company and also on the Lucky Corner claim of the Doctor Jack Pot company, are maintaining their usual weekly tonnage of about eight cars. This ore is reported to be giving returns ranging from $60 to $100 in carload lots. In the Little Clara, the ore is still coming from different parts of the big stope, which is a couple of hundred feet high, several hundred feet long and fully 100 feet in width. The ore all shows a quantity of sylvanite. Perhaps the largest amount of ore and the best in quality is being taken from the Lucky Corner and that, too, in two different places. In the verticle shaft, which is less than 150 feet in depth, there is a splendid ore shoot. It is only about three feet in width, but the grade of the ore runs from $100 per ton and better. In the Moffat tunnel, where the ore is mined from the Little Clara, there is also operations being conducted on the flat vein in the Lucky Corner, which is of liberal dimensions. There is not a lease in the camp that is producing the amount and quality of ore as are these two leases.

As a result of the heavy shipments which are being maintained by Thompson and Humphrey, the Doctor-Jack Pot company is reported to now have over $30,000 in its treasury and it will not be surprising if this company begins the payment of dividends within a short time. On the other Doctor-Jack Pot territory Smith and Altman are leasing and are getting out some ore of a fair grade.

Tom Johnson, who has a lease on the middle block of the Burns of the Acacia company on Bull hill, is upraising and also drifting north on ore at a depth of from 300 to 350 feet. Johnson is working on the same basalt dike which is producing so handsomely for Messrs. Ward and Hills on the Pharmacist. The vein which Johnson has opened is about three feet wide on the average and in its there appears a narrow streak from which values are obtainable running as high as $50 in gold to the pound. Johnson is making regular shipments at the rate of a car a week and expects to increase this tonnage [illegible] within a very short time. Considerable development work is now in progress. The ore is giving values of about two ounces in gold to the ton and some of the "high grade" is being saved with a view of a special rich shipment, which will go out in the course of a few weeks.

Hills and Ward, operating on the Pharmacist at an approximate depth of 250 or 300 feet, are sending out several cars of ore a week and they are getting nice values. The Pharmacist company now has over $10,000 in its treasury and no outstanding indebtedness. On the other end of the Pharmacist, Leslie Carlton is doing a large amount of dead work at a depth of 900 feet. He has opened up several good-looking veins, but so far has been unable to catch the values in sufficient quantities to warrant shipments. There has been a good many thousand dollars expended [illegible] but to date [illegible] been no return.

Carpenter and company, operating on the Moose property on Bull hill, are shipping out considerable ore just now and the ore [illegible] somewhere less than one ounce in gold to the ton. Carpenter and associates have opened up a large body of low grade ore and are shipping two and three cars per week. There are several sets of lessees operating on different parts of the Moose and nearly all have encountered some ore. Wherever it becomes of good value the veins appear to be pinched and narrow.

The big strike made in the Portland on the 1,000-foot level in the No. 2 shaft is holding out well; in fact it is believed [illegible] as develop[illegible] work [illegible]. The company is getting out [illegible] average [illegible] now as a [illegible] at [illegible] it is estimated [illegible]

This may be slightly exaggerated, but the Portland is easily the heaviest producer in the Cripple Creek district at the present time. For a while and the first time any mine ever surpassed it, was a few months ago, when the Golden Cycle for a few weeks shipped out 400 tons daily.

NEW LEASE ON LIFE

LEADVILLE EXPECTS A GREAT DEAL FROM TUNNELS.

Bores Being Driven and Those Perfected Will Make Practically a New Camp of Cloud City.

LEADVILLE, Colo., May 22.—Tunneling projects are today the most interesting feature of Leadville mining. Needless to refer to the magnitude and importance to which the Yak tunnel has attained. This great bore, already over two miles long, passing under Iron and Bruce hills and headed under Little Ellen on its course through Mosquito range, now produces the heaviest tonnage in the district. It has ore reserves that 20 years of vigorous mining will not exhaust. It already controls thousands of acres of mineral lands along its course and is continually reaching out for more with a systematic policy for absorbing title at nominal figures on every piece of ground anywhere near its line or the laterals projected from it.

The Dinero tunnel on Sugar Loaf, now in 2,500 feet and being pushed rapidly to its objective at least 1,000 feet farther, has such bright prospects that two other enterprises of even greater importance and of much greater acreage are already under way, one on each side of it. On the north side the Birdella-St. Kevin bore, under management of W. E. Bowden, has over 500 acres ahead of it, including many of the greatest producers in the St. Kevin district. South of the Dinero the Siwatch tunnel, directed by J. F. Horner, has 50 acres ahead, including the Red Hook, T. L. Welsh, Venutre, Tiger, Shields and other mines with a record of millions produced through the shallow tunnels and incline shafts of the early days of Sugar Loaf.

The Garibaldi tunnel, at the head of California gulch, was driven 1,500 feet 20 years ago, opening upon an enormous mass of iron pyrites, but which had scarcely any gold and silver value. During the past few months lessees have opened up a small vein of gold-silver-copper ores of such good quality that by economical working it is made to pay regularly. Recently the lessees of the Sunday lode have made arrangements to put the Garibaldi tunnel in thorough repair, and they will extend it under the Sunday and into the country beyond it towards Ball mountain. The advantages of this to the Sunday property alone are obvious. The tunnel will cut hundreds of feet under the shaft; it does away with the expensive surface plant required, drains the ground thoroughly and will make an easy wagon haul to the railway for ores taken out through it. But it will also make possible rapid, economical exploration of a large and most promising area east and southeast of the Sunday towards the Bell mountain fault.

North of Birdseye, where phenomenally rich veins of gold-copper ore have been found during the past two years, at least three tunnels (one from the level of the Arkansas) are being driven, which will result in thorough development at great depth of these veins and at a minimum of cost. Across the valley, in Delmonico gulch, the Emerald tunnel, under Manager Nesion, is believed to be approaching a valuable vein, judging from the heavy mineralization of the ground through which it is now passing.

Truly, this is Leadville's tunnel era. But projects of even greater importance are well under way. Much confidence is felt that a railway tunnel, with one terminus near Park City in Park county, the other to be somewhere on Big Evans, will crosscut the remarkable mineral belt which unites Lake and Park counties. This project, which is being financed in London, will be nine miles long and its estimated cost is $5,000,000. Under Mosquito it will be 3,000 feet from surface and is certain to become the outlet for an endless tonnage of ores from the sedimentary beds under which it will pass for the greater part of its course.

Already a tunnel project to open up the gold mines near Granite to the level of the Arkansas valley is working. This is of direct importance to Leadville because when it has done its work for the Granite district it may prove to be the most feasible plan for unwatering the downtown district of Leadville and making available on economical terms the vast bodies of mineral known to underlie this city and vicinity, but which are guar[illegible] [illegible]

BIG LEASES ARE LET

COMPANIES FORMED TO OPERATE IN GOLDFIELD.

Two Full Blocks Secured From Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company.

GOLDFIELD, Nev., May 23.—Eastern capital has been pledged to the amount of $10,000 to develop two big leases on ground owned by the Goldfield Consolidated Mines company. One lease, embracing two full blocks, is located on Combination claim No. 2, and the other, also embracing two blocks, is on Combination claim No. 3. Both lease companies have been fully financed and there is no stock for sale.

The Stoneham Mining and Leasing company has been incorporated to work the lease blocks on Combination No. 3, with Charles A. Stoneham of New York, president; E. W. Griffith of Taylor & Griffith, vice president; John M. Fairfield, secretary and treasurer, and Col. H. G. Heffron and Governor J. F. Mitchell, additional directors. A two-compartment working shaft will be sunk at once and equipped with a 25-horsepower hoist, which will be set close enough to the shaft so that when pay ore is struck a new and larger hoist can be installed without the necessity of discontinuing hoisting for an hour.

The Stoneham, Moore & Griffiths Leasing company is the name of the company that will operate on Combination No. 2, blocks 2 and 3, formerly known as the Moore lease. The principals are Charles A. Stoneham, Harry Moore and E. W. Griffiths. There is a two-compartment shaft down 20 feet on this ground which the new owners propose to enlarge to a three-compartment shaft and sink to 1,000 feet at once. Milling ore that will assay $20 a ton has already been opened up in the shaft, but Mr. Stoneham believes that high-grade will be found when the greater depth is attained, and he is in favor of going after it with all speed. Stations will probably be cut every 10 feet and crosscuts driven to the ledge as sinking progresses.

Both leases run for 18 months, and Stoneham, Moore & Griffiths have a guarantee from the Consolidated company that any ore under $20 a ton that may be on the dump at the expiration of the lease will be milled by the parent company and settlement for the same made with the leasers at a fair valuation.

The Five Friends Mining and Leasing company is pushing its west crosscut on the 35-foot level to catch the rich Red Top vein, which has been opened up in the Mushett lease on the Miss Jessie claim of the Laguna. At a point 200 feet out from the shaft the crosscut passed through a strong ledge but no attempt has yet been made to explore it. Water is now coming into the workings, indicating the presence of other ledges.

On the 250-foot level crosscutting is also in progress and a good ledge carrying fair value has been cut.

General Manager Hyland believes he has a splendid chance to get the Red Top ledge, and from the lay of the ground and the strike of the vein his judgment appears to be based on substantial grounds.

STOCK MARKET SLUMPS

PRICES COLLAPSE WITH GREAT VIOLENCE.

All Trace of Fostering Measures of Support Disappears. Mixed Opinions as to Motives.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Prices of stocks collapsed with great violence during today's short session of the market. The outpouring of stocks was heavy in some quarters, but the striking feature of the proceedings was the disappearance of all trace of the fostering measures of support which have been present throughout all stages of the proceeding advance in prices and through the period of digestion of profits which has been going on this week. There were mixed opinions in Wall Street as to the motives for this sudden change of policy in the conduct of market operations.

The filing of the suit by the government against the New Haven for violation of the antitrust law did much in the belying of the much-heard assumption that the truce had been arranged between the administration and the corporation and a tacit agreement of the softening of the rigors of prosecution against railroad corporations. So much has been heard of this assumption in connection with the recent rise in stocks that the incident was dreaded for its effect on speculative holders of stocks who have acted upon it. Another view of the collapse was that it represented the normal culmination of a movement which has been under suspicion of artificial and manipulative origin from the outset.

Despite reports recently of the continued shrinkage of railroad traffic, a decrease in idle car surplus was reported by the American Railroad association in their statement published today, the increase in number of idle cars in two weeks reaching 8,963 cars. This represents a turn in the tide of equipment going into idleness since March 18, since which time there has been a large increase in each two weeks period. Apparently these favorable developments have not attracted as much demand for stocks as was hoped for and as was relied on to digest the profits of speculators who had bought in anticipation. A flood of stock came from these sources today and caused the break in the market, extending all the way to six points in Union Pacific and St. Paul. The expected decrease in bank cash appears in the actual condition, but not in the averages and the loan expansion serving at the same time to increase the reserve requirement, there results the decline in surplus reserve which the banks have had to report since early in February.

Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $1,426,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call for the week.

WHEAT FIRM ALL DAY

DROUTH REPORTS RESPONSIBLE FOR STRENGTH.

Shorts and Commission Houses Active Bidders—Offerings at No Time Excessive.

CHICAGO, May 23.—The wheat market was firm all day, with the exception of a slight dip at the start, due to lower cables and to liberal deliveries on May contracts. Additional reports of damage by drouth in southern Europe and Kansas were chiefly responsible for the strength. The bulge in corn, however, had some effect. Shorts and commission houses were active bidders all day, and offerings at no time were excessive. The market closed firm. July opened ⅛ to ¼c lower, at 89⅞ to 90c; advanced to 90⅝@¾c and closed at 90⅝@¾.

Corn was strong the entire day on active buying by shorts, which was based on continued wet weather in portions of the corn belt. An official forecast of more rain tomorrow helped further strengthen the market. The market closed strong. May sold between 75¼ and 76⅜ and closed at 76. July opened unchanged to ⅛ higher, at 65⅝ to ¾, advanced to 66⅛@¼ and closed at 66⅛.

The bulge in corn caused a firm market for oats, but the volume of trade was small. July opened unchanged, at 46⅞c, advanced to 47¼ and closed at 47⅛.

Provisions were easy on a 10c decline in live hogs. Local packers were the principal sellers. At the close July pork was off 5c, at $13.57½; lard was off 5c, at $8.42½; ribs were 2½c lower, at $7.32½@$7.35.

MONEY ON CALL.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Money on call nominal. Time loans dull and firm; sixty days, 2½ to 2¾ per cent; ninety days, 2¾ to 3 per cent; six months, 3½ to 3¾ per cent.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Close—Prime mercantile paper, 3½@4 per cent; sterling exchange fairly steady with actual business in bankers' bills at 487.10 for demand and at 485.35 for sixty-day bills. Commercial bills, 485@485½.

Bar silver, 52; Mexican dollars, 47.

Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

A FIRE PROOF TOWNSHIP.

Concrete villages really exist, says Cement Age. An example may be seen at Haworth, N. J., on the West Shore Railroad near New York. This is an enterprise launched by the Franklin Society for Home Building and Savings, of New York. This society has been the agency through which nearly a thousand houses have been built or purchased, and it is the highest tribute to concrete to state that in the building of Haworth it was adopted as being the most economical proposition presented to the company. The result thus far comprises twenty houses completed, some monolithic and others of concrete blocks. Several of the houses are shown all of them substantial and attractive. Here, as in other instances, the waterproofing problem caused anxiety and trouble at the start, and it was found necessary in some instances to apply an exterior coating of cement to the block houses. An admixture of waterproofing compound would have made this unnecessary had it been used in the manufacture of the blocks. The monolithic process resulted in a dense, waterproof concrete. Cost records disclosed the fact that the monolithic houses cost about ten per cent more than the block houses owing to the use of forms especially for ornamental details. In the block houses a smooth surface block with four to one mix for the body and two to one for the face was used, while in the monolithic houses the mixture was one of cement, three of sand and five of steam cinders. These houses cost more than frame construction, but the additional outlay will be more than met by reduced cost for insurance and repairs. The dwellings shown are interesting examples of the application of concrete to houses of moderate cost, and it will not be long before the "concrete village" will be [illegible] in all sections of the country.

A HOUSE MADE FROCK

Drawn by

Katharine Vaughan Holden

The Famous Fashion Artist

HOW women ever existed in the Summer without cotton voile is a question. It is thin, supple, exquisite in coloring, wide in variety, and, best of all, reasonable in price.

It is not one of those exclusive materials difficult to find in the small towns, which make the country women envy the chances of the city women. Every little, as well as every big, shop keeps it.

It is [illegible] than muslin, and does not need so much washing, yet it can take a tubbing as well as a handkerchief.

Not only is it [illegible] in the lovely light colors that make it alluring for afternoon and evening frocks, but it comes in pavement greys and smoked browns that can be worn for a season on trains, and for shopping.

It is the preferred fabric for traveling. Half of the nice looking women you see on the trains this Summer wear dainty little frocks of it in the colors that do not show soil like the two mentioned, as well as sapphire, navy blue, dark Havana brown, and close blue and white stripes. All of it is striped, it is true, but the width and styles of stripes vary.

It is preferred to pongee, which so many women turn to in cases of doubt, because the latter must be ironed after every wearing. Its ability to wrinkle at the slightest provocation is equal to that of glazed linen.

The cotton voile does not wrinkle easily and can shake out, which pongee can't be induced to do.

The frock sketched is an excellent example of what can be done with cotton voile to give it an exclusive appearance for wear at any hour of the day or evening.

This model is advised for any one who must economize on clothes; and especially for those who are traveling or going away on a vacation where baggage is an item.

A few months ago this gown would have been made too difficult for the amateur dressmaker because of its sleeve, but the patterns for this are so numerous now, that the sleeve is as easy to make as an ordinary one.

THE coloring of this cotton voile is plain grey, with a faint [illegible] of white [illegible]. It is not [illegible] grey, which every one should be thankful has not appeared again with all the other greys. It was [illegible] and unbecoming to even the youngest face.

The [illegible] of the grey is that soft tone of November skies or smoke. It [illegible] the [illegible] of big cities rather than [illegible].

This skirt shows the prevailing fashion in the plain front width, which has been brought about by the fashion for high [illegible] skirts. The plaits at the side extend to the back, where there is a box-plait.

Soft grey braid is used for the Greek key [illegible] shown here. If the home dressmaker finds this too much trouble, she can omit the center design and simply run two rows of the braid.

The blouse is draped in wide folds over shoulders, back and front and around arms. The bands are of wide grey braid in the supple soft weave. The [illegible] part [illegible] front, is of tucked [illegible] silk muslin, and the half yoke laid over it is of dainty ecru [illegible] design. The long sleeve [illegible] the under sleeve attached to it at elbow [illegible] of the tucks. It is of white [illegible] in a little full, gathered into a straight cuff, tucked and fastened at back. The belt of silk [illegible] the [illegible] fastened with a [illegible] at back.

The skirt in this model is long, [illegible] three fourths of the [illegible] skirts [illegible] made long. If a woman wants it for street wear, she could cut it off to clear the ground by two inches. If she [illegible] to be very smart in her appearance, she wears with it grey stockings and dull grey kid pumps with a [illegible] tongue in front and [illegible] silver buckle.

Strength, Health and Beauty

IMPROVING THE Digestive Organs

By Harriet Coates

A HEALTHY body largely owes its condition to healthy digestive organs. It is seldom that loss of strength comes from an insufficient quantity of food. The lack is from food not being properly utilized.

This lack of economy in nature can be attributed to a number of causes, but the principal cause can be traced to a weak disposition of some portion of the digestive apparatus.

Many will naturally ask "What shall I do to have perfect digestion?" The answer is: "Study well the conditions of the digestive organs, and each day make fresh air and systematic exercise a care."

The following exercises have been carefully selected and arranged to improve and preserve the health of these organs, and should be indulged in by old and young with moderation at the beginning:—

Loose clothing and plenty of fresh air is advised, also the practice of deep breathing.

The position to occupy for the first exercise is a sitting one. The body erect, supported upon the edge of a chair or some other secure seat; the thighs at right angles apart; the feet so extended upon the floor as to form a large base and the arms extended upward and parallel to each other.

No. 1. Begin action by slowly and gently twisting the trunk a little towards the right side. From this position permit it to fall slowly backward till it reaches a position approximating the horizontal. Hold this position for one to two minutes, then let it slowly rise again to the commencing position. Now twist the trunk to the left, and repeat the above directions.

This action may be repeated from four to six times with each side. The beginner may find it necessary at the commencement of the exercise to secure the feet by placing them under some firm object. After a little practice and limbering up they will be able to perform it without any inconvenience whatever.

Illustration No. 2 shows the position for the second exercise, which is the same as the first, except the changed position of the arms.

Begin action by permitting the trunk to gently bend in the lumbar region in the direction of the hip, on which the hand is placed, while the raised arm retains the position relative to the head, in which the movement commenced. The trunk should bend as far as it can without raising the body at the opposite side. This bent position should be retained for a half minute or so, and then the trunk should be brought back slowly to its original position.

This action may be repeated from four to six times upon each side, and resumed again after a little rest, reversing the position of arms as the body bends in the different directions. One must not expect to bend the limit at the commencement of this exercise; in fact, it is not advisable to try it; simply bend the trunk as far as you can without experiencing any unpleasant sensation. In this manner the extent of the movement will increase after a little practice, without any apparent effort on your part.

This action is far-reaching; it strongly affects the sides of the body, and the effect is extended to the liver and spleen.

The commencement of the third exercise is shown in illustration No. 3. It would be advisable to protect the knees with a pillow or cushion; they should be apart to better keep the balance.

Begin exercise by extending the arms horizontally forward and the trunk slightly reclining. From this position the arms are thrown, hands separated, backward as far as the parts will allow. The number of times for repeating this movement must be determined by oneself. The age and physical condition must be taken into consideration. At the beginning from six to ten times would be a fair average, increasing as you progress in practice.

This exercise does not affect the number of muscles as others do, still it calls into action some which are not often put into strong, healthy action. The muscles which are principally affected are those situated back of the shoulders. By this movement the muscles of the breast are acted upon, the ribs elevated, and the blood thrown into the hands, increasing their warmth. The more quickly this movement is practised the greater effect it will produce upon the anterior muscles.

Illustration No. 4 shows the position to assume for the fourth exercise. The knees should be protected from coming into contact with the hard floor. The arm should be stretched to its limit and the knee on the same side with the stretched arm should be extended as far back as possible; the opposite knee placed as far forward, the trunk to be held erect.

Begin the exercise by moving the side forward on which the hand rests, while the opposite side moves backward; now slowly twist the body on its axis as far as practicable. This should be repeated from six to eight times and then the position of the knees changed; the forward one being placed back and the back one forward, and the exercise repeated as above directed.

This exercise acts strongly on the abdominal muscles and as an aid to digestion it is highly recommended.

A WISE PRECAUTION

Some women will not use safety matches because of the difficulty of having to strike them on a prepared substance. Danger from the other kind is much lessened, however, if they are kept in glass or metal cases.

The match box should never be near drapery; nor should it be hung over the waste paper basket, as thus the temptation to throw away the match before it is thoroughly burned out is removed.

HEBE'S HELPFUL BEAUTY TALKS

Addresses of firms or persons engaged in any business, or names of proprietary articles, are not given. When any other information is requested by mail, please send self-addressed stamped envelope.

WHEN Spring days come the little folks become impatient of restraint and long for school days to end so that they may be out in the warm sunshine all day long. The Spring languor is felt by the children quite as much as by their elders, although they may be unconscious of the cause. If that is the case so much the better, for they will not give way to it so readily if they do not learn to expect it.

However, if the child seems pale and languid, then it is time for the mother to act, particularly if examinations and other [illegible] are in order.

A tonic and plenty of fresh air are what is needed. A certain amount of play out of doors must be insisted on under any circumstances. It is better to study [illegible] light than [illegible] noon hours, [illegible] spent out of doors [illegible].

Happy [illegible] country at this time of year, so that [illegible] at least, may be devoted to walks and drives after the early Spring flowers and long happy hours at tag and hide-and-seek without fear of city carts and automobiles to restrict the playground.

Nothing is better for building up the tissues and rounding the cheeks than raw eggs. They are a natural tonic, and when beaten up in milk with a little nutmeg grated on top, the children learn to like it.

When the child has been poring over lessons for several hours it will brighten up both mind and body considerably to jump up and perform a few simple exercises. The windows should be raised to let plenty of fresh air reach the lungs.

A lively little march on the piano accompanied by some light dumbbell exercises for ten minutes will induce sparkling eyes and return of animation.

Nothing will take the child out of doors more willingly than a little garden set apart for its own use.

From May to October, from the planting of seeds to the gathering of next season's supply, a garden is a never-failing source of amusement, particularly to the only child who lacks childish companionship.

Nothing is better to clear muddy skins and freshen sallow complexions than pottering about in a garden. In May, before the sun gets too hot, beds should be [illegible] and the warm days of the [illegible] and the gentle breezes allowed to play freely through the hair. This acts as a tonic on both face and scalp and makes the childish frame sturdy and strong.

Even the plot of a city yard, or a box on the back roof, will be better than nothing green at all in the Spring time.

Of course digging in the earth is not very good for the little hands, but children usually rebel at gloves. It is better to wash grimy hands afterward than to insist upon irksome coverings for them.

The gift of a manicuring set and some small towels marked with the youthful gardener's initials will do much toward overcoming the effects of the fresh garden earth.

A pair of parallel bars in the garden and a good strong swing will help materially in developing the small boy's muscle and encourage him to bring his companions home to play, rather than have him go elsewhere.

Old-fashioned grace hoops, battledore and shuttle-cock, hop-scotch and prisoners' base and ball are all games to lend grace and health to the little girl's frame, and are much better for her than sitting on cold doorsteps to play jack-stones, which scrape and enlarge her knuckles. Do not be afraid of letting the little girls run and race at this time of year. It will not necessarily make them tom-boyish, and it will certainly give them clear complexions and other signs of good health.

During the Winter many children contract such habits as sitting or standing incorrectly so as to make one hip larger than the other, or raise one shoulder too much.

These little faults are not always detected by the busy teacher, who can spare but little time for individual cases and seldom is able to do more than correct her young charges during class. In the Summer when the hot days make long study hours unnecessary, is the time to absolutely overcome these disfiguring habits.

Do not allow the children to loaf too much during the Summer, for their own sakes as well as the peace of mind of the family. Ask the teacher in gymnastics to suggest some exercises to overcome any detected crookedness of body. See to it that these exercises are regularly carried out.

Let each child have a few daily tasks—not too many as it is holiday time, but enough to give them some daily employment. This makes them move around and exercise both body and mind so that they will not get out of working condition before the Fall comes.

Children who spend the greater part of the Summer in town, must especially be encouraged in performing little household tasks or outside errands to keep the digestion and general health good.

Home kindergarten games will amuse the younger children and the older boys and girls are the better for the errands and household duties mentioned before. Have a course of reading aloud to train the speaking voice and to develop the throat and chest. Embroidery and plain sewing, drawing, painting and music—none of these things will hurt the youngsters and will employ minds and hands [illegible].

Anything is better than allowing the youngsters to curl up in a chair with a book held at an improper angle for reading. Teach them during the holidays to sit correctly while reading and writing.

One especially important matter to be watched when the children are at home is the matter of eating between meals. They are very apt to do this when the kitchen pantry is so convenient. It is all right for them to have some milk or lemonade or raspberry vinegar with a few crackers or bread and butter about eleven o'clock for they are used to a light lunch at recess when at play. Further than that the regular meal hours should be insisted upon if the little folks are to have good digestions and pretty complexions when they grow up.

Hair Tonic.

Miss B. S. and Florence C.:—

Bay rum .... 10 ounces
Resorcin .... 30 grains
Tincture of cantharides 2 drams

Graceful and Healthy Children.

Dear "Hebe":—I would like your advice in regard to my two little daughters (twins). They are not quite seven and already require ten-year sizes in clothes. Such rapid growth makes them awkward and worries me. I thought perhaps you might advise some special exercises, for the physicians only laugh and say: "Let them grow," but they are extremely thin and exceedingly tall. Both my husband and myself are short.

—MRS. MARY F. LEONARD.

Give your twins good nourishing food and see that it is well masticated. Plenty of milk and raw eggs would be most beneficial. When children grow so rapidly in height, you cannot expect them to increase very much in flesh at the same time. Have their sleeping rooms well ventilated, and let them be out in the warm sunshine as much as possible. Gymnastic exercises and dancing lessons will teach them to be more graceful. Don't worry about their height as that is something you cannot control, but by care you can so nourish the body that it will grow in strength at the same time. Plenty of sleep is very essential to growing children.

Oily Scalp.

Miss B. S.:—Massage and a good tonic are the best means of overcoming the oily condition of the scalp. Use the tonic given above. Massage once daily for ten minutes and apply the tonic every other day. If you will use egg in the shampoo instead of borax I think you will find the hair will stop falling.

How to Massage the Scalp.

Florence C.:—When you massage the scalp, place the fingers firmly on the back of the head and with the tips of the fingers move the scalp in a rotary motion, that is round and round, until the entire head has been gone over. Use tonic given above and apply it before the massage.

Hair Dye.

Mae R. B.:—Balm of venus is to increase and will add firmness. The walnut hair dye I think will answer your purpose. Try a small portion of the hair until you get the desired shade. I cannot give you a formula like the cream mentioned. If you have not kept the formula for the hair dye send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and I will mail it to you.

Red Ears.

J. T. O.:—Perfectly healthy ears should be of a very pale pink, like that of the surrounding flesh. If they are continuously red the condition may be the result of frequent pinchings or pulling, or the sequence of exposure to the cold. Wash them [illegible] and [illegible] with this lotion:—

Powdered Alum .. 1 teaspoonful
Borax .... 1 teaspoonful
Tinc. of Benzoin .. 2 tablespoonfuls
Rose Water ...... 8 ounces

Effects of Rouge.

Martha:—Rouge if removed each night with a cleansing cream will not injure the skin. The rouge you are using is a very well-known preparation.

Sage Hair Extract.

Thirty:—I repeat formula as requested. You could substitute rosemary water for the bay rum, as you dislike the odor of it.

Place one quart of boiling water and two ounces of sage in an iron pot, allow to stand for twenty-four hours and then filter through filtering paper. Digest one ounce of pine tar in one quart of water for forty-eight hours, stirring occasionally and then filter, mix the two together and add:—

Bay Rum .... 1 quart
Cologne .... 2 ounces
Tincture Cantharides .... 2 ounces
Glycerin .... 4 ounces
Distilled Water .... 20 ounces

Apply to the scalp once daily with a tonic brush and massage for ten minutes after applying the tonic. This will gradually restore gray hair to its original color and is also a good tonic.

To Improve the Appetite.

W. J. M.:—Take a brisk walk every morning, rain or shine, the feet well shod, protecting them from dampness. I think you will then be able to eat a breakfast that will nourish and strengthen you.

Foot Trouble.

Hopeful:—I would advise you to consult a good chiropodist.

In Answer to Many Questions Concerning Lotions and Treatment.

Louise M. D.:—Witch hazel should not be heated if used on the face. It is good for the large pores. Lemon juice should be diluted with rose water, equal parts, when used as a face bleach. In treating the face the blood is brought to the surface, and often stays there for a while, particularly if you have been using pressure in taking out blackheads; it should soon pass away. The instrument is called a comedo or blackhead extractor. It can be purchased at a surgical [illegible] store. It is never advisable to pick a pimple. Use a pimple lance when it has formed a yellow head, pierce out the [illegible] with the little [illegible] instrument. Do nothing to bring a pimple to a head. Follow the directions given for treating pimples and blackheads. The lotion you mention will not cause a growth of hair. Bathing the chin in very cold water will not reduce it. Vibratory massage will reduce and cold water will prevent its getting flabby. To overcome excessive perspiration take a plunge bath daily in tepid water, followed with a cold spray. Bathe with this lotion, and dust with talcum powder:—

Tannic acid .... 1 dram
Eau de cologne .... 8 ounces

I will mail directions for treatment if you will send addressed, stamped envelope.

To Remove Freckles.

F. O. P.:—First remove the freckles with this lotion, by applying twice a day:—

Freckle Lotion.

Corrosive sublimate ...... 2 grains
Powdered borax .... ½ dram
Lemon juice .... 1 ounce
Rose water .... 4 ounces

Each night use the cleansing cream and three times a week give the face a thorough massage with the massage cream. Before going out apply a very little of the cleansing cream and then use powder. This will be a protection from the wind and weather.

Hair Restorer.

P. D. R.:—The glycerin in the restorer is one of the necessary ingredients. Shampoo the hair before the first application; apply to the scalp each night with a soft brush, massage for five minutes. When the color is restored use but once a week.

Sulphate of iron .... 1 dram
Sulphur .... ½ dram
Tincture jaborandi .... 1 ounce
Extract of rosemary .... 4 drams
Alcohol .... 1 ounce
Glycerin .... 1 ounce
Elderflower water ...... 8 ounces

The Correct Way to Treat the Face.

Lucille:—The way you treat the face each night is correct. In the morning use the toilet water. Immediately after steaming the face use the massage cream and massage for ten minutes, wipe off all the cream and bathe with toilet water. Unless you have a great many blackheads do not steam more than once a week.

The Cause of Split Hair.

Mary R.:—Your hair may not be dry, but the oil does not seem to reach the ends, therefore, they are dry and brittle, and cause the splitting. Have the hair singed, to remove the split and broken ends and massage the scalp each night, giving it a good deep movement, so that you move the scalp. This will improve the circulation and strengthen the hair. The tonic at the top of page is a very good one.

Curling Fluid.

Helen F.:—This curling fluid is used in place of water to moisten the hair, before putting up in curlers.

Bruised quince seed ... 1 tablespoonful
Distilled water .... 1 pint

Boil gently until reduced to one half, strain and add:—

Alcohol .... 1½ ounces
Cologne .... 1½ ounces

The egg shampoo will thoroughly cleanse the hair without using soap.

Wrinkles Under the Eyes.

Troubled:—Massage with a good skin food should improve these wrinkles under the eyes. You must persist in giving it as lines cannot be removed by a few treatments. Try to discover what is making the lines, lack of sleep and facial contortions will soon wrinkle the eyes. Remove the cause and improvement will be rapid.

BABIES WHO WAIT.

While the young mother is apt to think her baby on the point of disease each time it cries, the more experienced one knows that the infant who is dangerously ill rarely cries hard.

One old nurse declares she always welcomes the first attack of sobbing after a child has had a dangerous sickness.

Here are some cries that when heard should be watched:—

A hoarse, fretful, rattling cry is often a forerunner of bronchitis.

A fretful, sharp cry with an occasional wheezing sound usually means croup; a moaning cry indicates fever; a loud, steady cry pain somewhere.

Work and Play for the Idle Hour

CENTER-PIECE OF CARNATION BRAID, FRENCH KNOTS AND SOLID EMBROIDERY

DRAWN BY SARAH HALE HUNTER

WHEN using this printed design from the paper the directions are as follows:—

If the material used is very sheer, the easiest way is lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

In transferring a design when only one-half is given fold your linen so that the two right sides come together. Between these two sides insert two sheets of impression paper, placing the wrong sides of paper toward each other, then place your design on the folded material and draw each line firmly with a hard, sharp pencil. You will find that both sides of the design are reproduced on the linen.

This centerpiece is a combination of coronation braid, French knots and solid embroidery.

The scallops must be padded, then closely buttonholed, with the curved ends worked in the outline stitch.

The outline of the flowers and ribbon is done with mercerized coronation braid. This is laid along the design, which should be in embroidery hoops and is caught down with a small stitch on the right side and a long one on the wrong.

The large dots are worked solid and the small ones as French knots. Use mercerized cotton No. 25.

MISS HUNTER'S CORRESPONDENCE

TO MARGUERITE.—The best way to dispose of your work is through exchanges, unless you can secure many private orders.

An entrance fee is required and a small amount is deducted from the price of each article that is sold. Each exchange has a list of rules and it would be advisable for you to write for one before sending your work.

The Summer sales at the large hotels will soon begin and many of the exchanges sell a great deal at this time.

If you will send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope I will be glad to give you a list of reliable exchanges.

Lingerie Hats.

To Mamie:—The lingerie hats this year are most of them made over a frame like a sailor hat. The crown is quite high and the brim is the same width all the way round.

You can make your hat in all-white embroidery, but the neatest hats are worked in colors on white, the trimming corresponding in color with the flowers of the design. A piece of wide ribbon, finely plaited, is drawn around the crown and a large soft bow of the same is placed at the front a little to the left side.

The brim is faced with shirred chiffon, soft silk in colors or white, or in ruffles of narrow lace.

Knotting Threads.

To Emma G.:—Do not knot your thread in embroidery, as the effect is very bad when the work is pressed. Run the needle in and out two or three times under the part which is to be embroidered.

The work will cover the end of the thread and keep it from slipping through.

Another thing to remember is always to fasten off your thread by running it backward and forward on the wrong side of the embroidery and then to cut the thread and start afresh on the next design.

Never carry the thread from one design to another, as it invarably shows when the embroidery is done up. If the material is sheer it shows through and if heavy it makes an ugly ridge.

Filet Net.

To Mrs. F. B. H.:—You can get instructions for filet net work in book form. They are too long to be given through the paper. At the large department stores, where art needlework is sold, you can buy "Needlecraft on Filet Lace." This will give you full instructions and a number of patterns.

Baby's Afghan.

To Mrs. M. F. B.:—The instructions below are for a baby's afghan. I will be glad to tell you more definitely about this pretty afghan if you will send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Material—Eight fold Germantown.

Five hanks gaslight blue, No. 2.

Three hanks cream white.

Or eight fold imported Germantown.

Seven hanks gaslight blue.

Four and a half hanks cream white.

One long bone crochet hook, No. 6 or 7.

Crochet a chain seven-eighths yard long. On this chain crochet 4 rows of blue with star stitch and 4 of white, and so on, making 9 stripes in all, 5 of blue and 4 of white.

Break the yarn at the end of each row, making a right and wrong side of the work.

Tie in on the bottom of afghan a fringe four inches long to match stripe and crochet shell on top and sides.

Tiny Initials.

To H. R. B.:—On handkerchiefs or underwear the tiny initials are most often used. These can be surrounded by a circle of Hemstitching, featherstitching or eyelets. If you wish to make it more elaborate, a wreath of very small flowers may be embroidered in the solid satin stitch with the initials in the center.

Two illustrations are given here and an Alphabet In small letters has been published.

Mottoes to Follow.

If you cease to grow taller you cannot stay where you are.

Nothing needs more explanation than a lie.

Don't think your neighbor is the only one whose house is of glass.

No good comes without seeking. Look for trickery and it usually is to be found.

Seasonable Entertaining

In all entertaining the seasons should be considered, especially in table decorations. What will be effective in Winter seems heavy and out of place on a hot Spring day.

When giving either a luncheon or dinner during May, aim to keep the room cool, the lights shaded, and the color scheme restful. For luncheon do not have artificial light and shut out the strong sunlight as far as possible. In the evening use only candles.

On a hot day it is well to cool the room with an electric fan, if it can be put far enough away that the buzzing is not annoying.

Keep the decorations Spring like and delicate. Wild flowers are ideal, but unfortunately fade quickly. Dogwood, however, arranged in great bowls can generaly be kept fresh through a meal, and its white, or white and pink, are especially dainty looking.

Wild azalea also keeps fairly well, if kept damp until the last minute; while daises, which come along later in the month, have unlimited possibilities.

Among garden flowers nothing is lovelier for Spring than flat bowls of pansies in all colors, a large mass in the center with a smaller finger-bowl size between every two plates.

The menu also should not be so heavy as in Winter. On a hot night, and the hostess can usually tell in time to do her ordering, have jellied soup instead of a hot one.

See that the first course is icy cold, and serve a sherbet in the middle of the dinner.

Crab ravigote or other cold crab mixtures could be substituted for hot fish, the salad should be a light one, with French dressing rather than mayonnaise. Indeed, there need be but one hot course; the meat one, which should be game or poultry, preferably.

Serve the coffee iced and on the porch if you own one. As some of your guests may prefer hot coffee even with a thermometer at a hundred, it is well to have both kinds.

HAPPY PARTIES FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

By Mary Dawson

A JUVENILE party program which ensures against dullness from the outset is a progressive frolic where nonsense games are played from table to table.

Eight tables is a good number for the series, the fun at each one being different. At the first have a tin dish pan filled with water, in which float the little water toys in form of ducks, terrapin, fish, etc. Players are provided with fishing tackle and the two players who in a fifteen minutes' round capture most aquatic creatures receive the stars on their tallies, which mean progression.

At the second table have a bowl or basket filled with inexpensive buttons, needles, thread and strips of cotton goods. The amusement consists in seeing who can in fifteen minutes sew on the greatest number of buttons. The buttons must be neatly and firmly sewed to count. The strips of goods are renewed after each round.

In arranging the third table have a basket filled with lengths of twine, in which knots and tangles have been tied. Each piece of string straightened out counts one point for the player performing the feat. The two children winning most points progress. The entertainer should be prepared to furnish other knots should the supply in the basket run unexpectedly short before the series is complete.

Word Building.

Fourth Table. Here the basis of the frolic could be a large basket of anagram chips, either of cardboard or bone. The two children who can form most words with the chips before the supply is used up progress.

But one chip can be taken from the basket at once. Words are built in front of the players on the table and are arranged in little piles in front of him, to be afterwards displayed to all the competitors. Any word incorrectly spelled forfeits a correct word in counting up.

Sliced Pictures.

Fifth Table. Pictures cut from magazines (or postcards) should be cut up into irregular shapes and jumbled in a bowl. The two children building most complete pictures from the scraps in the given time, are allowed to progress.

Sixth Table. Each child receives a tumbler filled with mixed grains, such as pearl tapioca, barley, rice, corn, etc., and two match sticks.

The contest lies in seeing who can empty his tumbler between signal bells, dividing the cereals into separate heaps and lifting them with the match sticks.

Seventh Table. A conventional table game could be used for one number of the series. Jackstraws is jolly for this, or Yacht Race, Old Maid, or Snap.

The two players having highest scores proceed as before.

Eighth Table. Provide a bowl of water about two-thirds full and a basket of nails. The bowl should stand in a rimmed platter to catch the overflow.

Each child guesses how many nails must be dropped in to cause the water to run over edges of bowl. Each player's guess is written down on a card. The two who come nearest receive the lucky stars. The water in the bowl should be changed each round in order that the players who do not progress have no unfair advantage over the newcomers.

Outfits for playing table games, dominoes, jackstraws, jackstraws or snap make good prizes for the youngsters winning best scores.

CHILDREN'S BOOK TEA

A new and pleasant birthday party for children of the school age is a Book Title Tea, on the same plan as that of their elders, but with titles of juvenile books instead of adult works represented for guessing.

The cards which when divided give the different book names should be prepared in advance of the occasion.

As each boy or girl arrives a ribbon on which a card is swung is hung around his or her neck, pencils and paper being distributed at the same time.

On each card is a number. When all have arrived a bell rings as a signal for the guessing to begin. Players now commence writing down the names of the books they think [illegible]

Examples of juvenile book titles pictorially represented are given below for the benefit of the entertainer who wishes to try this plan.

Picture of Madame Recamier or any other famous beauty colored black as if in silhouette. Black Beauty.

Sketch of a slipper, or a tiny crystal slipper (one of those sold as favors for holding candy) sewed on card. Cinderella or the Little Glass Slipper.

Map of Arabia and pictures of medieval chevaliers. Arabian Nights.

A spray of American Beauties represented as fully opened. Rose in Bloom.

Sketch of a katydid followed by a question mark. What Katy Did.

Picture of a knight in armor followed by the word, Christmas. "The Night Before Christmas."

These suggestions are merely hints of what can be made a clever and amusing puzzle.

EIGHT O'CLOCK PARTY

When, for schoolday reasons, an afternoon party is not practicable for the young folks, 8 o'clock is the usual and most convenient hour for beginning the fun.

When an eighth birthday is to be celebrated the fun becomes specially appropriate.

It is something new and very diverting to found all the amusements of the evening on eight, rewarding punctuality, penancing those who come late and carrying out the same plan in different ways.

Write the invitation for an Eight O'Clock Party on cards in the center of which you have sketched a clock face, with hands pointing to the hour of eight.

The invitations can be engraved in jingles if preferred.

Begin the fun by presenting small boxes of candy to the children who arrive on the stroke of eight or nearest to it.

Those who make their appearance later are sentenced to perform various laughable nonsense stunts in expiation. When all the children have arrived write the names of all on the blackboard and award boxes of bonbons to any or all whose names contain exactly eight letters.

A jolly game is arranged by having all the youngsters sit around a large table and providing cards with pencils attached. A prize is offered for the longest list of words containing exactly eight letters which any child can form between two signal bells.

One bell is rung for the start and another for the finish, just fifteen minutes later. At the end of that time cards are collected and sent away for examination by some grown person. The prize could be a new puzzle or mechanical toy or an illustrated book.

STORING WARM WEAR

In putting away clothes for the Summer after they have been brushed, beaten and aired, they should be wrapped in newspaper or heavy paper.

If one buys heavy yellow rags, such as are used by grocers, and [illegible] time.

A little camphor or other moth preventive must be in the bottom of the bag. The ends should be folded over to make them air tight, and if the article is valuable the edges of paper may be coated with a thin glue as an extra precaution.

Models in Chiffon

THE popularity of ruby and cerise tones is the thing most interesting in millinery trimmings. The entire gamut is used for fashionable hats, from vivid cerise down to the deep, warm tones of cherry brandy.

The six illustrations chosen show the popular shapes and trimming effects, all in pronounced cerise tones.

Model No. 4 is of rough straw in Dubarry rose, in Amazon shape with a high bowl-shaped crown of moderate size and a silk brim that shows increased width at the right side. This is turned up into a graceful roll on either side, and the outer edge of top brim is outlined with inch-wide border of satin.

The crown is encircled by wide satin ribbon in slightly darker tone than the straw, folded many times in its width so as to form a narrow band; a rosette made of the same ribbon above crown band at right side forms foundation for button in Japanese design, enameled in rose and gold.

Three plumes shaded in tones of rose are fastened at back of crown so that the heads are turned towards the front, falling heavily over crown as well as brim. The graceful outlines of this model are greatly accentuated by the fact that the hat fits closely on the head, no bandeau being employed.

Model No. 2 is a turban a la Dauphine. Malines in the new patchon tone of cerise is used for the foundation, the back portion considerably higher than front and sides.

The trimming of Yedda braid in a lighter tone is applied to the maline at regular intervals and follows the shape in every detail. At left side is placed a high aigrette of deep cerise heron, and a Roman gold ornament with an overlaid design of cut steel covers the stems. The various sections of the Yedda braid are connected by velvet ribbon in the tone of the aigrette, carelessly run through the braid and forming a long-looped bow at the left side, falling over the hair.

MODEL No. 3 is a large Moujik turban made from a hood of orchid fancy straw. This hood is draped over a foundation frame with high tymbal shaped crown, the brim part resting on the hair in almost vertical position, and dented at either side of the front, so as to be slightly triangular.

The crown is encircled with a wide band of taffeta ribbon in light tone of orchid—this shade is a dull cerise with a mauvish tint—which forms a big sprawling bow with many high-standing loops and ends at back of crown, increasing its height.

There are also three enormously large peonies made of silk in six tones of orchid, the deepest of which is almost purple, each surrounded by large flat wreath of dull green and brownish red foliage, and applied so that the foliage forms a fringe over brim.

Model No. 5 shows the popular Henri XI shape. It is of fancy straw in the deepest tone of aurore, the latest rose tint. The crown is straight and brim is of modest dimensions, straight and of even width all around, with just a slight tilt at either side.

A pompon formed by four ostrich plumes in four tones of aurore, the palest one being almost a bluish pink, is the only trimming.

Model No 1 is intended for general wear. It is a blocked shape in Milan in the third lightest tone of Daphne—a clear, cold rose tint with a yellowish undertone. The crown has the appearance of an inverted bowl and the brim is in "canotier" style, flat at back and right side, rolled at left side, where it increases in width. The crown is given height and breadth by two crush roses of large dimensions in three light tones of Daphne with bright yellow centres, placed at front of crown, which they cover. A twisted band of velvet ribbon, almost a deep copper color, forms the dividing line between the roses and is used as a crown band, terminating in a large, soft bow, which rests on the back brim.
